"In the short period since our 1934 Frigidaires were first placed on public exhibition," Mr. Newell wrote, "the response of homeowners and housewives everywhere has been more than gratifying."

"There is no doubt in our mind that the days and nights spent by Frigidaire research scientists, engineers and cabinet designers to create the new Frigidaires has been more than repaid by the welcome given them by the public.

"I am sure every one of the 15,000 dealers and salesmen in our organization feels as I do, that in the new deal in business and buying, the 1934 Frigidaire is a new deal in refrigeration."
