

ATTENDS FIRST SHOW
It is reliably reported here that the showing of the Ford Motor company picture, "These Thirty Years," was the first moving picture Will Holcomb ever saw.

It was the first free show ever to be staged here.

According to our scouts, Mr. Holcomb fainted during the course of the movie. During an auction scene when the auctioneer was asking for bids on an old horse-drawn hack, a flock of chickens ambled up and flew into the vehicle. And so excited did Mr. Holcomb become at this incident that he jumped to his feet and bid thirteen dollars!

Before the auctioneer had time to ask for further bids something scared the chickens out of the hack and Mr. Holcomb fainted for fear the old carriage would be knocked off to him.

However, upon learning that the price had been raised and he would not have to buy the chickenless carriage, he recovered nicely.

And while on the subject it has also been reported that Mr. Holcomb recently attended a meeting of the Jonesville Parent-Teacher association. Which is strange, because everyone knows Mr. Holcomb is not a teacher.

HE LIKES EGGS
This is none of our business, but our scouts informed us that M. Q. Snow went into a local cafe the other day and called for an order of eggs.

"How do you like them?" the waitress asked before giving directions to the cook for their preparation.

"Oh, I like them fine!" Mr. Snow was said to have responded.

WE GOT THIS STRAIGHT
According to Mrs. Errol Hayes, Dick Freeman, of the knee-action wheels, approached her upon the subject of buying an automobile.

"What do you call the one we've got?" Mrs. Hayes wanted to know.

"The show boat," Mr. Freeman replied.

MUTTER AND MUMBLE
In regards the Merchants association play at the schoolhouse last Friday night, Mrs. A. L. Griffith deserves plenty of credit. You try directing choruses every afternoon and amateur actors every night for about four weeks straight and see if it isn't work. . . . And in case you don't know it, Coy Bates put in plenty of hard work painting the scenery, assisted by Sarah Click—and he didn't even get to see the thing. . . . John Sagar is from England—and not a trace of English accent after four years in America. Like all Englishmen we have known, he's a nice fellow. . . . Paul Price looks swell in a uniform. Maybe we can arrange a war. . . . Lots of blessed events hereabouts these days. . . . Dan Barbour is another advocate of street nameplates and house numbering. . . . Prospects of a shoe factory here have been revived. . . . Duck Burcham says "40 years and don't know it all yet." With such frankness he could never be a politician. . . . We understand French Graham stands the best chance of getting the post-office—that it's in the bag. . . . Frankly, we are going to miss Uncle Charlie Bodenheimer. Even if he is a Republican he is accommodating as nobody's business. And situated as we are we're in a position to know. . . . Garland Johnson, cashier of the local bank, has suffered slight paralysis of the face due to sinus trouble. Here's hoping his condition will have improved by the time this sees print. . . . A letter from home reports "—and if we have any more measles here there'll have to be a new crop of children."

THIS AND THAT
Thanks to the kindness of Adam Elam the New York Daily Mirror continues to arrive daily.

We wanted to go home for Easter, but measles is (or should it be are?) no respecter of holidays—as if we ever had a holiday.

Carl Goerch in The State (for which Mrs. Weir is carrier boy) made the statement some weeks ago that a certain stretch of road somewhere or other is the longest stretch of straight road in the state. He gave the distance as six or seven miles, if we remember right. Huh, just let him drive from Boohville to East Bend and he'll see his mistake. That stretch lacks but a fraction of being 10 miles with nary a curve in it.

Judge J. R. Patton, Jr., who during our sojourn as court reporter in Durham was judge of recorder's court, is running for solicitor of superior court in his district. And if we weren't afraid Mr. Brummitt would start a primary investigation or something we'd run down there and vote for him.

Green at court reporting (or most any other kind, for that matter) Judge Patton's kindness in helping us over the rough spots through friendliness and a willingness to answer all questions (and some fool ones, we're afraid) has not been forgotten. And that, coupled with the belief that he would make a very capable solicitor is one of the reasons we'd cast a vote for him.

Even if he did yank us up in front of the whole court one day and use us as a model to show where a certain plaintiff had fractured a shoulder blade. We wouldn't have minded it so much if we hadn't had a big grease spot on our shirt due to a perusal of the under parts of Calamity that morning.

Those were good old days in Durham. We remember Officer Gill, of the detective force, who was always so good natured and who kept posted on the newest jokes. Just last week we read an account in the dailies telling of the electrocution of a Durham Negro who murdered Detective Gill while resisting arrest.

But there we go again. Just an old man gloating in memories of the long long ago which cannot possibly be of any interest to anyone other than ourself.

"BURN" HUEY LONG
As a display of their resentment at Senator Huey P. Long's verbal attack on Col. E. R. Bradley, Kentucky turfman, a group of trainers, exercise boys and race track habitués Friday night at Louisville, Ky., burned and hanged the Louisiana senator in effigy. The demonstration was inspired by Long's recent assertion on the floor of the senate that "in Kentucky Beadley may be a gentleman, but in Louisiana he is a dive-keeper."

KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE
Miss Sadie Nancy Livengood, 53, was instantly killed when struck by an automobile in front of her home just outside the Winston-Salem city limits Friday. Mrs. W. T. Rainey, driver of the car which struck Miss Livengood, was booked on a charge of manslaughter and released under bond.
