A CALF AND A CROP Have the Same Idea on the Food Question

Why is a growing calf like a growing crop?

Answer: Because the food requirements of each are so much the same.

Scientists are making this point clearer every day through their research into the importance of vitamins in animal diet and the need of impurities in the food of plants.

These vital impurities are the all-important thing in fertilizing today. They are the rarer elements—boron, iodine, magnesium, potassium, calcium, lithium, strontium and many others. With them your crops produce as Nature intended them to.

Chilean Natural Nitrate contains these rarer elements in Nature's own balance and proportion. Chilean's quick-acting nitrogen, plus its vital impurities, make it the safe, sure fertilizer for your crops.

See your dealer for Chilean Natural Nitrate. Two kinds—

Chilean Natural Nitrate—the only nitrogen that comes from the ground—the ideal side dresser for your crops.

Champion (granulated), Old Style (crystals). They are both genuine. Both are natural. And both give your crops the vital impurities.
