

EDUCATION . . . new thoughts I often quote a remark I heard Woodrow Wilson make, years ago. "The purpose of education," he said, "is to make young people different from their parents."

The last thing a school or college should do is to discourage individual thinking. I liked what President Hutchins of Chicago University said the other day. "If young people must meet new ideas some time, it would seem the part of wisdom to have them meet those new ideas where they are fairly presented by intelligent people who have no axes to grind."

Nothing can be worse than for a boy or girl to get his or her new ideas first from self-seeking propagandists or political demagogues.

YOUTH . . . opens doors There never has been a time, in my experience, when so much thought was being given to the ideas of the young. On the one hand I hear old fogies expressing alarm lest youth get radical ideas from the study of what is going on in Communist Russia and Socialist Germany; and on the other hand I hear ardent young men and women protesting that they should be allowed to express their own beliefs, whether they conform to tradition or not.

I don't apprehend any danger to civilization from the free examination of new ideas. A generation from now the world will be what those who are young today will have made it. It will be their world. They will have to live in it. And I am firm in the belief that any new or "radical" ideas that don't prove workable will have been scrapped long before their young proponents of today have grown up.

TEAMWORK . . . of the future My guess about the kind of social order that is going to come out of the thinking of the youth of today is that it will be based very much more upon collective efforts in every phase of life than upon individual initiative. I have a feeling that we are going to evolve in America some sort of a collectivist philosophy which will be neither Communism, Socialism—as we use the term today—nor Fascism.

It is certain that business will continue to become more closely organized. Social activities, even those of children, are more highly co-ordinated than ever before. The whole tendency of the human spirit today is toward cooperation. Somewhere a balance will be found, I believe, between the extremes of old-fashioned rugged individualism and the suppression of all individual liberty such as prevails under Communism and Fascism.

LIGHT . . . in churches I vote 100 percent for the proposal that churches should be "lighted up like motion picture cathedrals." That was recommended to the Methodist Protestant Church Conference last week by its Lord's Day Committee.

The gloomy, colorless interiors of most Protestant churches give children the idea that there is something sour and solemn about religion itself. Only once in a while have I seen an American church that gave the impression of joy and happiness—and my idea of religion is that unless it is joyous and happy, it isn't much of a religion.

The "show places" of Europe are the great cathedrals, in which the greatest works by the greatest artists are displayed, and the most lavish use is made of color and decoration. I would like to see more of that sort of thing in our own churches.

HYMNS . . . in earnest The Methodist church has authorized a revised hymn-book—and I am glad to see that most of the thrilling old hymns and tunes have been retained, and only a few of the "unsingable" ones. I've often thought that I could compile a hymn-book that wouldn't have a single tune in which the whole congregation could not join in harmony, not a hymn whose words did not carry some message of brotherly love, or some "glad tidings of great joy." And I would fire the organist or choir-master who persisted in setting the tempo so slow that the most joyous hymns sound like a dirge.

One reason why I, though brought up in the Congregationalist church, like to attend Episcopalian services sometimes, is that the Episcopalian sing their hymns as if they were glad to be there.

I hear many folk discussing "What's wrong with the churches." I think one thing wrong is that so many of them are such dismal places.

Leo Moxley Passes Away in Yadkinville

Leo Moxley, 25, died at the home of his father, Ex-Sheriff C. E. Moxley, in Yadkinville, Sunday night at 11:00 o'clock, following a short illness with a complication of diseases. He had been in ill health for several months but had been serious only two days, a heart attack being the immediate cause of death.

He was born in Yadkin county, a son of ex-Sheriff Moxley and the late Mrs. Moxley, and had spent his life in the county. Besides his father he is survived by one sister, Mrs. Rich Brown of Booneville. He was married about six years ago to Miss Rachel Cornelius, who survives him, but who has been making her home in Winston-Salem for the past two years.

He was a member of North Oak Ridge Baptist church where the funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 following a short funeral service at the home in Yadkinville at 2:00 o'clock. The pastor, Rev. J. T.

Murray, was in charge of the services, assisted by Rev. R. L. Speer and Rev. T. S. Draughn. Interment was in the church cemetery.
