FLAMES DESTROY LARGE BUILDING HERE DEC. 24TH

Old McNeer Hardware Co. Structure Burns to Ground

LOSS IS HEAVY

In full blast before discovered, fire here Christmas Eve morning com-pletely destroyed the old McNeer Hardware company building on the corner of Main and Market streets for a while threatened to wipe out the entire block before being brought under control by local fire-

Originating in the Dixie Barber Shop on Bridge street, the flames swept southward, quickly converting the entire building into a raging inferno, and then spread to the roof of the Exchange Furniture company building. The blaze also ignited the roof of the Elkin Motors, Inc. building, and for a while it was feared both that building and the Lyric theatre building would fall prey to the blaze.

Handicapped by frozen hydrants, snow, ice and bitter cold, local firemen battled desperately to bring the fire under control. Lines of hose from every hydrant within reach were centered on the roaring mass of flames, and local citizens, not included on the roster of regular firemen, pitched in to aid in the fight.

When at last brought under control the fire had completely destroyed the McNeer building, which housed the Dixie Barber Shop, an office occupied by Carl Chappell, Dallas Martin and W. S. Reich, and

MERCURY TUMBLES TO 2 BELOW HERE

Snow and Low Temperatures Give Elkin Real Taste of Winter

King Winter made his presence felt here with a vengeance over the holidays, sending two snows on consecutive week-ends and climaxing his performance early Tuesday morning by sending the temperature tumbling down to two below zero.

The first snow fell the Sunday Christmas, covering ground to a depth of about one inch, part of which was still in evidence last Saturday night when the first flakes of a six-inch snow began to Temperatures that had mained well below freezing for days had prepared the ground and streets for the snowfall.

Tuesday morning's cold weather said to be the coldest here in many ears, brought varying reports, ranging from two to seven below ero. Two below, however, is thought to be nearest correct.

Following the week-end snowfall highway forces got busy and cleared streets and highways. Due to the difficulty of driving, few cars were in use and no serious accidents were reported locally.
