

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

Washington, Feb. 2. — While there has been no change in the generally friendly attitude toward organized labor on the part of the Administration and the majority leaders in Congress, the demand for their support made by John L. Lewis, leader of the labor group which is trying to organize the automobile industry workers, has had the effect of toning down much of the enthusiasm for Labor's cause.

Mr. Lewis, in so many words, called upon the President to pay his debt to Labor for re-electing him. That brought forth a veiled but unmistakable rebuke from the President. Mr. Roosevelt's friends point out that, while undoubtedly the mass of industrial workers voted for him, there is no evidence that Mr. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization did any more in his behalf than did the American Federation of Labor, although Mr. Lewis did collect nearly half a million dollars from members of the United Mine Workers as a contribution to the Democratic campaign fund.

But neither that nor anything else, these friends say, justifies a demand by Lewis for support of one faction of organized labor in preference to another; nor can impartial observers see that the Administration is under any greater obligation to Labor than it is to all other citizens. To all it owes impartial administration of the laws designed to insure equal justice and opportunity to everybody, and to none does it owe more than that.

Reaction Against Lewis
Mr. Lewis' ill-considered demand has had the effect of making the Department of Labor and all other Government agencies concerned with the Labor situation "lean backward" in the effort to show no favoritism and to avoid the appearance of paying off a political debt. It has also cooled Congressional ardor for some of the more advanced phases of organized Labor's program.

When Congress assembled there

NOW THEREFORE, I, the undersigned Commissioner, will on March 8, 1937 at 2:00 P. W. M. ALLEN, seemed to be a fair chance of the enactment of the much talked of thirty-hour week law. Now that outlook seems very dim. And until the Supreme Court finally rules on the constitutionality of the Wagner Labor Relations Act, on which arguments have lately been heard, there is hesitation on the part of the Government to invoke its provisions in the General Motors strike.

The electric power situation has come out into the open. Chairman Arthur Morgan of TVA forced the issue with a public statement of his position, which is, in brief, that there should be a pooling of interests between TVA and the private power companies in its territory.

This attitude is bitterly opposed by David Lillenthal, Dr. Morgan's second in command, and by Senator George Norris, "Father TVA." They want private power companies put out of business. Each side would like to have the President lined up with it, but he has so far resisted all efforts to force his hand for a commitment one way or the other.

President's Power Committee
The President will eventually decide as between the two divergent power policies but to gain time, and test the strength of public opinion behind each point of view, Mr. Roosevelt has appointed a power policy committee with Secretary Ickes of the Interior Department as its chairman.

The belief prevailing here is that the Ickes committee will report in favor of the Morgan policy of cooperation with private power interests wherever the Government engages in public works which result in power production, and that the President will accept that as the Administration's policy.

Unless there is a reorganization of the executive departments calling for additional Cabinet departments, the belief here now is that the President will make no changes in his Cabinet for some time to come.

Only one Cabinet position becomes vacant by law when a President's term ends. That is the Postmaster General, and Mr. Roosevelt promptly reappointed Mr. Farley to that post. Mr. Farley has stated publicly that he wants to get out of Government service if he can find a good job with a future in it in private business, but until such an opportunity turns up he will trail along with the President.

A permanent Secretary of War to replace Harry Woodring, whose appointment has been regarded as a temporary stop-gap, may be appointed shortly, but unless some Cabinet officer dies or resigns no other changes are now expected.

Secretary Daniel C. Roper of the Department of Commerce, whom many regarded before election as being on the way out, is said to have lined up such powerful political backing among the Southern Senators that it would be impolitic for the President to ask for his resignation.

Court Legislation Fades
Talk of legislation affecting the Supreme Court is dying down. There is no probability either that the number of justices will be increased by statute, or that any law restricting the authority of the court will be enacted.

In case of a vacancy, which is not at all unlikely when the advanced age of most of the Supreme Court Justices is considered, it is thought likely that President Roosevelt will announce a policy of picking a judge from one of the union Federal courts. This would relieve him from any obligation to name Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the majority leader, who most ardently desires a seat on the Supreme Bench.
