

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

Washington, May 11. — As things look now to experienced and impartial observers, there does not seem to be a chance for the enactment of the President's plan of adding six justices to the Supreme Court. There is a bare chance that Congress might agree to a compromise proposal, to increase the Court by two, to a total of eleven, but even that is not to the taste of the opponents of the whole program inside the President's own party. The inclination now is to delay action on the whole Court proposal until after the constitutionality of the Social Security Act. That law has been brought to the Supreme Court by an appeal by the Government from the ruling of the Federal Circuit Court of Boston, which declared the Act unconstitutional. The expectation is that the Court will hear arguments this month and had down its decision late in June. If it upholds the Social Security Act, political wiseacres say that will definitely kill Congressional support of the Court-enlargement scheme. If the decision is against the Social Security Act, then the compromise plan for two additional judges has a chance, although that will be fought bitterly, on principle, by powerful leaders on the Democratic side.

ly in the House, is due to the belief that the President is personally much more popular with the public than he is ever with the majority of his own party on Capitol Hill. Something like a wave of antagonism to the Administration is growing rapidly in both wings of the Capitol, and there is a strong inclination becoming manifest to give the President no more grants of personal power and perhaps to withdraw some of the powers which the last two Congresses gave him. It seems certain that many of the Administration's proposals will suffer defeat, and that Congress will do its own bill-drafting on major matters from now on, instead of accepting whatever the White House proposes.

That seems likely to be particularly true of the whole plan of tax revision. Everybody recognizes that the present tax system is a jumble in which unworkable and oppressive elements are mingled. Roswell Magill, the new Undersecretary of the Treasury, has come out with a proposal to rewrite and recast the whole system of corporation taxes on a more equitable basis. To do that will take time and plenty of study. Congress is not inclined to rush any more tax bills through in a hurry. Therefore the tentative program now is to enact no new tax laws this session, but to extend for another year the excise taxes which expire by limitation this Summer, and in the meantime set committees to work employing experts and holding hearings as the basis for a broad and comprehensive new tax program to be put through at the next session.

Economy Measures Favored

Congress is serious about economy. There is growing strength behind the proposal of a horizontal cut of 10 percent in all departmental estimates. The alternative plan proposed by the Administration's supporters and said to have originated at the White House, to give the President authority to "impound" 15 percent of all appropriations and appropriation savings and reductions among Federal departments and bureaus as he sees fit, has met such a cool reception that it is not regarded as having a chance. Opposition to it is upon the same ground that most of the rest of the Congressional opposition to the Administration is based. That is the feeling that while personal authority and discrimination granted to the Executive by previous Congresses was all right at the time in view of the economic emergency, it would create a dangerous precedent to continue that practice of delegating authority now that the emergency has passed. That feeling does not arise from any personal distrust of Mr. Roosevelt. No one thinks that he has any inclination to abuse the tremendous powers which he has been given. But there is much distrust of the motives of some of the President's advisers.

Partly because of that growing sentiment and partly because of a real urge for economy, it seems likely that several measures favored by the Administration will fall by the wayside. These include the Wagner Housing Bill, the plan to set up regional "TVA" projects around seven or eight of the Federal power developments, Federal aid for schools, and all of the Department of Agriculture's proposals, such as a new form of AAA, the farm tenancy relief proposal and crop insurance. There is an evident though largely under cover revulsion in Congress against farm relief projects as a class. The feeling seems to be that more has already been done for farmers than for any other class and that it is about time now that the economic situation is back on an even keel, to slow down on legislation in the interest of particular classes. For the same reason, it begins to look doubtful whether any new Labor legislation will be enacted this session, though much study will be given to the Wagner Act with the idea of developing from it a broader and better-balanced Labor policy.

At the same time, the Republicans are beginning to come out of their tent and show signs of political activity. The expectation here is that there will be more talking for political effect from the Republican side than there has been so far this year. All sorts of talk about Republican and "Right Wing" Democrats forming combinations to defeat the New Deal is going around, but most of it can be dismissed as "wishful thinking." However, the decision of the Missouri Republican organization to get behind Senator Bennet Champ Clark for renomination at the Democratic primaries for 1938 is a straw which possibly indicates a wind blowing in the direction of a Conservative coalition.
