IRISH POTATOES GOOD HOG FEED

Boiled in Salt Water, Make Feed That is Excellent and Inexpensive

POTATO PRICES LOW

Irish potatoes boiled in salt water make a good, inexpensive hog feed, said H. W. Taylor, extension swine specialist at State College.

The bumper crop of potatoes produced in Eastern North Carolina this spring have driven prices to a low point and made second grade and cull potatoes available at an unusually low cost, he added.

Inferior grade spuds can be fed to hogs profitably, he continued, and this will help reduce the surplus that demoralized the market.

But be careful not to feed raw Irish potatoes, he continued, as they may injure the porkers.

Cooked spuds are nutritious and harmless if fed with corn, fish meal or tankage, and pasturage, Taylor explained. Three to four pounds of potatoes have about the same feed value as a pound of corn.

With each three to four pounds of spuds, he said, feed at least a pound of corn. Too many spuds will throw the ration out of balance.

If the potatoes are boiled in salt water they will be more palatable, and will furnish part of the salt the animals need. The salt water, however, should be thrown away, as it is harmful to hogs.

When thoroughly cooked, the spuds are easily digested and are a good source of minerals, carbohydrates and vitamins. The skins also provide roughage.

A very nice old lady had a few words to say to her granddaughter.

"My dear," said the old lady, "I wish you would do something for me. There are two words I wish you would promise me never to use. One is swell and the other is lousy. Would you promise me that?"

"Why sure, Granny," said the girl. "What are the words?"
