To hear some people talk you'd think poverty is something to brag about.

Edward's love affair would have been a path of roses had it not been for the superfluity of detour signs.

Soon be picnic time, and all the ants and not a few uncle bugs know in advance just where they will be held.

The papers say that Edward and Wally are planning a visit to America. Betcha some movie scout will meet 'em at the pier with an attractive contract.

Before our statesmen get through with it they will have learned enough about court-packing not to need any help in arranging their grip for the journey home.

Supposing that some day the federal treasury takes in a couple billion dollars more than it pays out, it would then be unnecessary for the Charlotte News to observe: "No wonder men are asking each other 'How long can it last?'"

Social item stresses the fact that it was "a quiet wedding" leaving the impression that it was in contrast with the usual raucous kind. But the story didn't go so far as to say that you couldn't hear a hem-stitch drop.

Promise and Performance

We will now have the privilege of seeing two theories, both bolstered by high-sounding pledges in advance, put to the test and note how they work out.

A few weeks back Mecklenburg county decided to have nothing to do with liquor stores. In the campaign against them the drys covenanted with the voters that if they would join in defeating this proposed form of control, there would be a campaign of law enforcement that would put the skids under the bootleggers. That was a pledge that took in a lot of territory, but the voters accepted it in good faith.

Last week Wake county voted the opposite way, voted for liquor stores, and likewise the wets promised to curtail the evils of more abundant liquor while at the same time lifting something from the tax load in that county with liquor profits as the working tool. That, too, is a pretty large order and with conflicting angles.

The heft from the tax load will be measured by the volume of liquor the stores sell, and volume depends largely upon how aggressively the stores go after business, and seeking to extend liquor drinking is a mighty poor way to bring about temperance.

Of course it can be argued that liquor consumption in Wake could be cut one-third, still under the new arrangement turn over to the county treasury money that is now escaping and pouring into the pockets of bootleggers. But that would mean that the 'leggers would have to be robbed entirely of their trade—which isn't likely.

Now then we have two outstanding counties, each with an outstanding city, both promised programs that involve different approaches to the vexing liquor problem, and the State will be watching to see what eventuates. Mecklenburg dries have their chance to do some house-cleaning and keep their pledges; Wake county wets have the machinery that is supposed to click in bringing about control. It remains to be seen whether Mecklenburg dries go to sleep on their jobs and whether Wake wets stress liquor profits above liquor control. We shall see what we shall see.

Unfortunate

It is unfortunate for North Carolina that Senator Bailey has elected to become an habitual scold: real statesmen rise above that, else they soon find themselves on the scrap heap. Able and aggressive Senator Bailey could be of distinct service to State and Nation, without any sacrifice of principle, were it not that he allows his personal peevishness to be reflected in his every action.

His hatred of Harry Hopkins explains his constant nagging in that direction, which all but resulted in a fist fight with the works progress director. His disapproval of many of President Roosevelt's policies, and the criticism that came because of this antagonism has created a dislike equal to his feelings toward Harry Hopkins. He has assumed the role of Huey Long whom he lambasted with such fervor when it suited his purpose to do so. But Long never yelped at the heels of the administration any louder or more persistently than Senator Bailey is now doing.

It is unfortunate, because his colleagues in the Senate are becoming calloused to his tirades, and thus the good in his reasoning, and there is good, will be catalogued with the less worthy and placed in the pigeon-hole marked "prejudice."

This is not meant to say that Senator Bailey should truckle to every whim of the administration, not that North Carolina doesn't want him to be a rubber stamp for anybody, but the voters who sent him to Washington would like to see him submerge his hatreds and get his feet on the ground. He is eternally right in some of his conclusions, as measured by the process of reasoning employed by those who went down the line for him in the primaries last year when he was extolling the virtues of the man he has now turned against.

Senator Bailey has the ability and courage to represent North Carolina with distinction, if only he would shed his newly adopted prejudices and show a willingness to give-and-take—which is one of the markings of a statesman.

We Have Invited It

The Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill has been approved by the Senate judicial committee, and once more this issue will furnish the opportunity for Southern members of Congress to throw a fit. Realizing that a vote on the issue would mean their defeat, it would not surprise if some of our Southern statesmen do not employ that silliest of all legislative procedures—the filibuster, and talk the proposal to death.

There are some provisions in the proposed legislation that might work a hardship on local government units, if and when lynchings occur. But these can be avoided by diligent law enforcement, and that is something we ought to have, with or without a federal law.

Some Southern States, and North Carolina is among them, have laws sufficiently severe to deal with lynchings. But they are not enforced. We still have lynchings, in spite of the law, and seldom is anything ever done about them. Men continue to take the law in their own hands, but because they are socially and politically prominent, nobody is able to identify them, and the solicitor, after a few high-sounding threats, lets the matter die the usual death. That has happened here in North Carolina, and is the rule all over the South.

These mobsters would think twice before undertaking their dastardly work if there was certainty that they would have to answer to the federal government, for the federal courts are not in the habit of covering up with whitewash.

As much as the next one we deplore the crime that usually is the basis for a lynching party, but equally do we deplore a mob meting out the punishment. If we are to have this anti-lynching law, it will come because of our own delinquency. We have only ourselves to blame, and our representatives in Congress, remembering that the law applies to all states alike, could curb their inclination to knife it, without much hurt to themselves and to their State.

The Stage Is Set

Europe is determined to fight it out. Not satisfied with the horror and human sacrifice of the last great conflict, not to mention the fact that the last war has not been paid for, European nations already are aligned for the scrap. The only reason they have not been at each other's throat ere this is because England is not yet ready.

The Spanish strife is only an incident, Spanish soil provides a convenient setting, and the conflicting interest there represents the line-up. Germany and Italy, working in concert, have been pouring soldiers and munitions into Spain for the use of insurgents. The loyalist government must be defeated, if the Italo-German stake is to be saved. And that is why British and French and Russian aid is for the other side.

But the issue in Spain is not developing fast enough. England is making good use of the time—preparing. And so other issues must be devised and Germany and Italy are attending to that little matter. Incidents are being manufactured or magnified to justify further interference in Spain, and one of these bright mornings the fuse will be lighted—and another world war with all its toll in human lives and all its toll in material values, will be on again.

For it will be a world. No discounting that. The conniving and planning has all been attended to. France and England and Russia on the one hand and Germany, Italy and Japan on the other. And somewhere down the line, mark our prediction, this nation will be drawn into the vortex. Doubtless the details leading up to our entry also have been attended to.

With Russia's unhampered aid the democratic nations could make quick work of such a conflict. But Russia will be hampered, very much hampered. She will be fighting Japan on one side and scrapping her neighbors on the other. Germany and Japan arranged that in that conference last summer.

And all of this upsetting and the suffering and anguish it will bring, is the work of two upstarts, two swashbuckling braggarts, Benito and Adolph, who must make a noise or step down. They choose to make a noise. And may God have mercy on their souls when they are through with the sorry mess they have stirred up.

FIRESIDE PHILOSOPHY

(By C. M. Dickson)

No artist, no philosopher, nor no poet can portray the real meaning of the words—"too late."

Of course, a person doesn't have to be a gentleman.

The eagle flies "upward" to look at the sun.

To be a "modern" scientist one merely has to "guess" at the age of rocks and identify his "family tree."

It's an awful pity that many children were not able to choose their parents instead of being the helpless victims of cruel fate!

The far-sighted man will see his way out before he goes in too far.

Some "beaux" will bend and some "belles" will rattle.

Subtract your vices from your virtues and the remainder (if there be one) is what you are worth.

Our greatest men have come from the (commonly called) lower walks of life.

As a rule, a soldier is known by his scars.

When a person becomes too good for earth he is soon winged and takes his flight to a higher clime.

Every child is debtor to its mother.

Civilization does not advance by leaps and bounds.

Obscurity is often the father of thought.

Labor and capital should be the best of friends.

No person has a right to take more from society than he puts in it.

It's easy to say "yes."

The person who can stand either wealth, education, or authority, is at least one third of a man; if he can stand all three, he is a super-man.

Too much formality is hypocrisy in disguise.

The person who looks before he jumps will usually land safely.

There's a marked distinction between a person who is really sick and one who is simply "puny."

The hereafter holds out no promise to a lazy man.

America—the land and the home of sports and spendthrifts!

Dr. C. L. Sherrill Dies Suddenly At Statesville Home

Statesville, June 24.—Dr. Coite L. Sherrill, 49, of the staff of the H. F. Long hospital, died suddenly tonight at 9:30 o'clock at his home on North Center street.

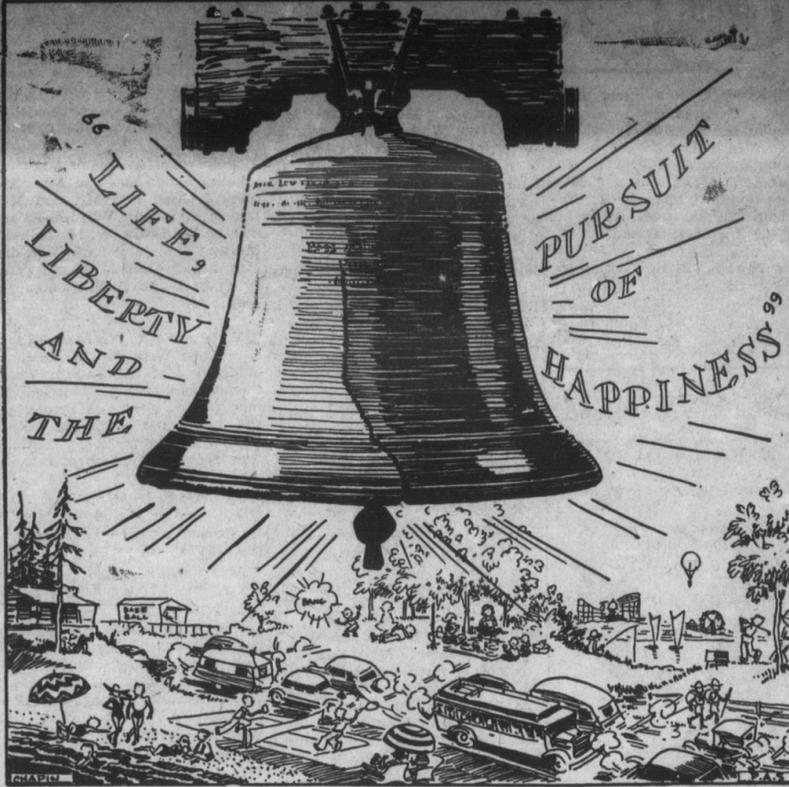

As house physician at the hospital he put in a busy day, working until late tonight, and was apparently in excellent health and spirits. He was at his residence, having just completed a long distance call when he collapsed as he took a seat in a chair, his death following immediately. A heart attack was given as the cause of his death.

Dr. Sherrill was engaged in the general practice of medicine here before entering the World War. On his return from France he became associated with the H. F. Long hospital and has been with the hospital continuously since that time. Dr. Sherrill has been prominent in the work of the American Legion. At the last meeting he was elected national commander of the Wildcat Division.

Dr. Sherrill is survived by his widow, who was before her marriage Miss Mary McLain, of Statesville, and three children, Henry, William and Marianna Sherrill, his father, Walter Sherrill, of Catawba, and a sister, Mrs. R. R. Clime, of Asheville.

Illumination Thoughtful Friend: "My good man, why don't you take the street-car home?" Illuminated One: "Sh no ushe. My wife wouldn't let me keep it in the house."

BLOOD BALANCE

Nothing should be appreciated more than perfect circulation of the blood in the body; and very many times we physicians, meet with variations from normal, which may be called "imbalance," or imbalances here and there, which may vary from congestions to actual dilations of the vessels—organic disease.

People with big abdomens are suffers in varying degree, from blood imbalance. There are a great many veins that traverse the abdominal wall and visceral content situated there. Anything that may cause "rush of blood" to these blood-vessels, produces immediate and very evident effect on structures elsewhere. A big meal is an example—overeating; intense determination of blood to the stomach and bowel, depleting the brain for the time being, causing dizziness, cloudy vision, staggering gait, stupor, with heavy feeling through out the already overfleshed abdomen. The symptoms may amount to a temporary helplessness, a not very enjoyable feeling in elderly persons.

I believe without accurate figures, that one-fourth of the blood volume may flow in a great tidal-wave to a ponderous abdomen, from overexertion, overeating, etc.; and, that this condition reacts heavily upon the heart and brain; of course the veins of such an abdomen become much dilated from the constant sagging, making possible, if I may use the term, "abdomen apoplexy."

Methods of correction are slow, discouraging, and are seldom persisted in to get the relief possible. Carefully practiced exercises are productive of results. Of course free daily evacuation of the bowel MUST be maintained. Here it is that starches in the diet must be cut down to a minimum. Indeed, the diet must be just what is needed and no more. In chronic cases patients who are short of breath and puff with slight muscular exertion, may wear a well-fitted bandage to support the sagging, indolent abdomen.

FURNITURE WORKER IS INJURED HERE FRIDAY

Colin Couch, 29, of Elkin, Route 1, is in Hugh Chatham hospital here as the result of injuries sustained Friday when he accidentally fell while at work at a local furniture manufacturing plant, where he is employed.

Carried to the hospital immediately after his fall, his most serious injury was found to be a fractured pelvis. His hurts are expected to keep him in the hospital for several weeks.

SPARTA WOMAN BREAKS BACK IN FALL TUESDAY

Mrs. W. E. Maxwell, 41, of Sparta, is in Hugh Chatham Memorial hospital here in a serious condition, suffering from a broken back sustained in a fall from a cherry tree Tuesday afternoon.

WILLYS AGENCY IS FORMED HERE

Charlie Morrison and Eck Reece Head Down-Town Auto Sales Co.

"SURPRISE CAR" OF YEAR

An automobile agency known as the Down-Town Auto Sales Co., has been formed here to handle the new Willys automobile, with showroom and office in the Down-Town Service Station building.

The new Willys is said to be the surprise car of the year. It is one of the smallest standard width cars on the market, and gas mileage of 30 miles per gallon and more is claimed for it. Although small from an outward appearance, clever engineering has provided a surprisingly large amount of room on the inside.

Among the many features are all steel body and top, extra large brakes, safety glass all-around, low center of gravity, fender lights, and highly responsive operation and control.

The new Willys is now on display at the Down-Town Auto Sales Co., and everyone is cordially invited to inspect and drive this outstanding automobile.
