Betcha between the two of them, Herr Hitler or Mussolini could tell whose submarine that was.

Time was when youngsters wanted to grow up and be policemen or engineers. Now they just want to grow up.

Too Much Power

Henry Ford has said that he will have nothing to do with unions. John L. Lewis told the recent Milwaukee convention of the C. I. O.'s United Automobile Workers that the unions will begin attending to that little matter in January at the height of the production period. Both are outspoken and positive about their intention.

In the meantime it is reported that Mr. Ford is considering a guaranteed five-day week, fifty-week work schedule for his workers as an advance move to thwart the unionization of his plants.

At present, Ford employees are sure of only seven to eight months' work each year. Under the contemplated system, they would be assured a full year's employment. That is calculated to make his employees more contented and less open to persuasion into the unions. For while the high wage scale paid Ford workers is attractive it is not generally understood that the final total earnings do not stack so high as in lower wage plants.

To offset this strategy the unions will strike at Ford through channels that do not lead directly through the gates of the Ford Empire. Workers in feeder plants whose products, in whole or in part, go into the Ford processes of manufacture and upon which he depends in large measure, will be called out. There will be strikes in body plants, wheel and axle and tire companies, in an effort to cramp the Ford style. And even the maritime unions will be expected to refuse to handle imported raw materials headed for the Ford Plants.

And thus we have two great forces for a finish fight for supremacy, each armed with weapons that can be made to overshoot their mark and hit innocent non-combatants.

And finally there is potential and far-flung danger ahead when any group of workers can reach out and find available power with which to club industry into submission, and there is just as great danger when obstinate dollars use the power that in them lies.

Henry Ford could close down every plant he owns, junk his entire empire, and still not be able to spend all his money during the balance of his days. Think what that would mean to dealers and thousands of others who are not a part of this labor fight.

It is not a healthy state of affairs when either an individual or a group can assemble such power as we are about to see unloosed in this fight, and sooner or later it will be necessary for the people, through their government, to take a hand, for in the end they will be the ones left holding the bag.

Working On Night-Spots

Down in Gaston and Mecklenburg counties they are not simply complaining about the iniquities of roadhouses, tourist camps and beer joints, most of which operate under the banner of "service stations" but the citizens and enforcement officials actually are doing something about it.

Judge Wilson Warlick started it over in Cleveland when he granted an injunction against the operation of one of these places upon the signed complaint of ten citizens who petitioned against the continued operation of a "nuisance."

Since then various places in Gaston and Mecklenburg have been closed by court order, their doors padlocked until they show good and sufficient reasons why they should be allowed to open and operate.

The Gastonia Gazette says the charge is openly made and widely believed "that the average tourist camp with cabins is nothing more than a place of immorality, where drunkenness and disorderly conduct are the custom. Proof of the charge against most of the tourist camps is that one hardly ever finds cars from out of the State parked there over night. Respectable folks do not patronize them and would not be caught in one of them."

That is laying it on rather thick, but who can say that it is not justified. It is as plain as the sunrise that two out of every three tourist camps in North Carolina could be plowed under and the remainder would have a hard time making expenses if they depended on legitimate tourist trade for their income. Every one suspects with ample reason, that the accommodations they provide are tagged with immorality, but nobody has been doing anything about it.

Probably the more populous centers lend themselves to this sort of thing more readily than elsewhere, but the more remote sections are not immune, not by any manner of means. But now that neighbors in the community have found a way to deal with these places, without having to depend solely on the law enforcement officials, it begins to look like these night-spots are in for a case of jitters.

Chandler Keeps Faith

When Governor A. B. (Happy) Chandler was campaigning for the high place he now holds, running on a platform that called for the abolishment of the sales tax and a more economical state government for Kentucky, and when he was overwhelmingly elected on that platform, North Carolinians were wondering what the outcome would be, many of them predicting that without the sales tax, Kentucky would go to the demdition bow-wows, and as for cutting down government expenses: that is something always promised but never fulfilled.

North Carolina was particularly interested because Dr. Ralph McDonald was running on a similar platform; contending for the same impossible things.

So what? Well, following the mandate of the people, Kentucky's sales tax, similar to that of North Carolina, was repealed and a substitute measure was enacted making up the loss by increasing revenues from luxuries, liquors and sources other than the general sales of retailers. And with what result? Governor Chandler, in addition to balancing the budget, has reduced the State debt by twelve million dollars, has embraced an extensive highway improvement program, bolstered the State educational system and inspired a spirit of general optimism among the people. That's the story visitors to Kentucky bring back with them.

Governor Chandler kept faith with the people by seeing to it that the sales tax was abolished in spite of the prediction that the State couldn't make the grade without it. The people of Kentucky were no longer encouraged to buy from mail order houses and from merchants in adjoining states in order to escape a toll that they despised.

He kept his promise to bring about a curtailment of government expenditures, too. Approximately nine thousand state employees who weren't needed, except as henchmen were given the air and department heads reduced from 119 to 22. (Read that last sentence again!)

And so when North Carolina officials are inclined to pat themselves on the back because of this State's splendid financial status, they should be reminded that this is so, not because of a curtailment of governmental costs or a lessening of the tax burden, as was the case in Kentucky. On the contrary administration costs have increased, and the income from the sales tax levy has increased with them.

Eyeglass Bargains

There still be those who go on doctoring themselves with patent nostrums that are either harmless fakes whose chief hurt is that they extract money from pockets of individuals who need it for other purposes, or which contain drugs that are actually harmful and gradually undermine the general health of the gullible who uses them. But happily these are growing fewer and fewer as people rise above them.

But there is another dangerous practice that shows little or no abatement: the haphazard method of fitting faulty eyes with glasses. The report of a national association of opticians says that "Americans are going blind hunting for eyeglass bargains." Which is to say that many of them are building future grief for themselves by relieving their faulty vision temporarily by buying glasses that they can "see through" but which are not in any sense of the word "fitted" to their eyes.

Each year finds a greater percentage of the population turning to eyeglasses and each year, the opticians declare, a larger number of irresponsible persons are traveling about the country peddling cheap and often harmful glasses to those who are willing to gamble with blindness.

Faulty vision can be corrected in many cases, but only when the individual case is studied and analyzed. Science has perfected a system whereby glasses are ground to a prescription with almost miraculous accuracy. But first there must be a careful and minute examination that is not possible from a peddler or dime store clerk.

We hold no brief for the opticians, but we do say for them that their preparation for their work, the costly equipment they invest in and the important service they render entitles them to a reasonable profit. To refuse them this and to take the risk of permanently injuring so important an organ as the eye, is like cutting off one's nose to spite the face.

FIRESIDE PHILOSOPHY

(By C. M. Dickson)

Some people need long handles to their names.

The "Amen" corner is rarely crowded.

An impractical theory is as good as none.

Should we walk in the middle of the road? Yes—No.

An Ethiopian may not be able to change his color, but he can wash his skin.

Lots of things "creep in" on the radio.

A bat needs no eyes.

The top is none too high.

A flea is very skillful in fleeing.

Only long-nosed people "nose-in."

Not every long-winded speaker has broad views.

Speaking from a strict sectarian standpoint, heaven will be vacant.

People seem to enjoy paying a tariff on "foreign" products.

Every person has some kind of an idol.

Courtesy is an inexpensive asset.

Heathens are not all found in foreign lands.

Hypocrites often amuse themselves by singing solos.

A "rainbow-chaser" and a "nail-keg-setter" have many things in common.

Something is "in the air" these days.

Satan does not want just anybody.

The most classical songs of today, perhaps, are those which are wordless, tuneless and spiritless.

The color of a flower does not necessarily determine the sweetness of its aroma.

Hats off to the man who actually searches for knowledge.

Piety outshines brilliancy.

Facial expressions may be an index to character, but the true test is in the performance of actions.

It is possible to run and have patience at the same time.

Some people are called solons when they are actually morons.

It's expected of an animal that has a gizzard to have grit in it.

Some people are so stately that they cannot bend without breaking.

MINE RIDGE

Farmers in this section are very busy taking care of their fodder and tobacco.

We regret that Mr. and Mrs. Ples Hanes have recently moved from here to State Road. Their friends will miss them very much.

Miss Grace Wellborn of State Road was the week-end guest of Misses Tamsie and Imogene Booth.

Tom Snow and a party of friends from Leaksville, spent Sunday here with his brother, George Snow and Mrs. Snow.

Misses Mable Tulbert and Evon Gentry of Shoaly Branch were the guests of Misses Hazle Juanita and Stella Lowe.

Mr. and Mrs. Odell Welch of Winston-Salem were the Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Smith.

A delightful party was given in honor of Miss Imogene Booth at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arvil Gentry Saturday night. A large crowd attended. Many games and contests were enjoyed.

Miss Annie Laura White of Pleasant Ridge visited her sister, Mrs. Ruby Snow, here Sunday.

George Royall Named President Young Democrats

George E. Royall, prominent Elkin business man, was unanimously elected president of the Surry County Young Democrats club at a meeting of the organization held at Dobson Wednesday evening of last week to make plans for the club's participation in the state convention held at Winston-Salem the latter half of last week.

Mr. Royall presided over the meeting as vice-president. Following his election as president, A. B. Carter and Mrs. Kate Barringer, of Mount Airy, were named vice-presidents. John G. Lewellyn was reelected secretary-treasurer.

LOAN PROGRAM WILL CONTINUE

Will Be Under Newly Established Farm Security Administration

DETAILS COMING LATER

The rural rehabilitation supervised loan program will continue as heretofore, under the newly established Farm Security Administration, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. R. O. Palmer, county supervisor in charge of rural rehabilitation work in Surry and Stokes county announced Wednesday from his office in Dobson, following assurances received from George S. Mitchell, Regional Director of the Farm Security Administration in Raleigh.

Palmer stated that the Bank-head-Jones Farm Tenant Act, which the Farm Security Administration will administer, provides for continuation of the rural rehabilitation and farm debt adjustment work which he represents in this section and that he has been instructed to carry on substantially as before, under the new agency.

Rehabilitation loans — accompanied by farm and home management advice from County Supervisors — are made by the government to financially distressed farm families who hold out hope of making a comeback—whether on their own land or on rented land—but who are unable to secure proper credit from other sources to make a crop or to purchase needed livestock and equipment.

In addition to the rural rehabilitation program which will be continued as an important phase of the new agency, the Farm Security Administration will conduct the tenant loan program, as provided in the Farm Tenant Act, for the purchase and improvement of farms for selected tenant farmers, and will complete unfinished farmstead projects, including those started by the Resettlement Administration and those turned over to that organization from other agencies.

Details concerning the handling of applications for the new tenant loans will be announced later by the Regional Office, Mr. Mr. Palmer has been advised.

Land use planning and sub-marginal land purchase activities, further provided for in the Bank-head-Jones Act, have been entrusted by the Secretary of Agriculture to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. This means that former Land Utilization work and that to be carried out under the new Act will be continued through a Land Utilization Division under the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, while the Farm Security Administration will conduct the tenant purchase and rural rehabilitation programs and complete farmstead projects now under development. Thus, the functions of the former Resettlement Administration and those added by the Farm Tenant Act have been divided between the Farm Security Administration and the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, according to the statement received by Mr. Palmer from the regional office.
