BETHEL

Ronda, Route 2, Oct. 25.—The high waters did much damage in this section to the corn that had not been gathered in the low lands. It being a little early to haul from the bottoms, most all corn was standing in the fields. No bridges were washed away but some very small ones and the most difficult places the travelers found with their cars along the roads were where new trunks had recently been placed and much loose dirt had been left.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. McBride and son, Billy, of Jonesville, were the guests of her aunt, Mrs. J. T. Triplett and Mr. Triplett here last Sunday.

Back of me are hundreds and hundreds of conscientious, enthusiastic workers—engineers, linemen, service men, meter readers, book-keepers, clerks and other office workers.

I'm proud of that bunch of folks! It is their job to keep me on the job—every hour, every minute—night and day. And they do it!

Through terrific heat, through bitter cold, in rain, in snow . . . regardless of obstacles or physical discomfort or sacrifice—they do the job . . . so that I may be constantly at your beck and call for any service, large or small.

Your Servant,
Reddy Kilowatt
