

SEVENTY CENTS—AND TRAGEDY
E. W. McDaniel, a far-away look in his eye, entered a local cafe the other morning about 8 o'clock.

Taking a seat at the counter, he asked for an order of cereal, and, much to the surprise of the waiter, had a second helping placed nearby.

After eating one bowl of the cereal, Mr. McDaniel ordered bacon and eggs. Again he had a second order placed at the vacant place to his right.

Coffee was ordered . . . not one but two cups, and a double order of toast. Each time our hero would eat a slice of toast he would lay one piece aside.

At last the meal was consumed, and Mr. McDaniel called for the check. It amounted to 70 cents.

"That settles that," he said out loud. "Marriage is too expensive."

Whereupon his plans for getting married were promptly cancelled unless he can find a wife who doesn't eat.

SPEAKING OF POETRY
Last week's spasm of poetry recalled to mind a poem that we heard when but a small boy and which we've never forgotten. It's about a mule, and everyone who has heard it please raise your right hand.

There was a wild-eyed Irishman
Whose name was Simon Slick.
He had a mule with dreamy eyes
And O that mule could kick.

He'd wag his tail and shake his head
And greet you with a smile,
Then telegraph his legs
To kick you half a mile.

He ran into a railroad car
And knocked it off the track,
He stuck his heel in a greaser's ear
And broke a negro's back.

He dissected sixteen Chinamen,
Kicked a yellow dog,
Knocked the stuffing out of a goose
And killed a big fat hog.

He ran into a peanut stand
And knocked it out of sight!
He ran into a boarding house
At 12 o'clock at night.

The women all ran out and screamed,
The men held their breath!
He rammed his hind leg down his throat
And kicked himself to death!

And after that he had no kick coming.
The following will was filed for probate in an eastern North Carolina county—we think:

To my wife, I leave her lover, and the knowledge that I was not the fool she thought I was. I also leave her my overdraft at the bank; she can best explain it.

To my son, I leave the pleasure of earning a living. For 25 years the pleasure has been mine.

To my daughter, I leave $100,000. She will need it. The only good piece of business her husband ever did was to marry her.

I want six of my creditors for pall-bearers, for they have carried me so long they might as well finish the job.

That was some snow at Asheville last week. According to the newspapers, the fall was measured at eight one-hundredths of an inch. Huh, we've seen it frost deeper than that around here.

Our Uncle Culpepper has already started on his second million. He's given up all hope of making the first one.

ROCKFORD

The recent heavy rains and subsequent high water did considerable damage to crops along the river and its tributaries. Water completely covered the toll bridge but the structure stood.

Mr. James Coe and family have moved from the section house to the former home of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Holyfield and the latter are now living in the old George Burrus house.

Mrs. Bass, who lives at Siloam, is now agent for the Southern Railway here, coming up every morning from her home.

The report of the pastor, Mr. Russell, of the work done on this circuit of the Methodist church was quite gratifying. Conference was held last week in Asheville.

A few people from this community went to the football game in Chapel Hill on Saturday. Mr. Arthur Graham, principal of the local schools, went down for a meeting of his group and attended the game.

Farmers are now marketing some of their tobacco and seem rather well pleased with the prices, quality considered.

George Washington, Jr.
"So your name is George Washington?" the old lady asked the small colored boy.
"Yessum."

"And you try to be exactly like him, or as nearly as possible?"
"Lak who?"
"Why, like George Washington."

"Ah kaint help bein' lak Jahg Washington, 'cause dat's who Ah is."
