

THIS AND THAT
It's one of those days when we can think of absolutely nothing to begin this column with.

John says the cogs in our head need oiling—so they can grind out an idea. We had an idea once, but nothing came of it.

However, don't you worry, because we're not going to have an idea today. Nor tomorrow. Nor next week or next year.

Every now and then various people make the remark that they would like to write this column just one time. It would make us powerful happy if one of them was to show up now. We'd gladly

Maybe we'll feel better if we cross our other leg. Some sign of movement on our part will make the boss feel better.

However, we've got our system with the boss when we feel one of these blank, staring spells coming on. We tell him we are doing mental work.

Still, he liked to have caught up with us one day last week. That is, I believe he was a mite suspicious when he asked us if it helped our thinking process to snore?

Can we help it if we think so hard we become mentally exhausted and drop off into a doze as our tired, overworked brain gives completely out? Of course not!

We have had two suggestions for this column during the past week. One concerned the lunchroom at the schoolhouse, the other was concerned with a clean-up campaign and a protest by a lady who said her neighbors littered up her yard with garbage.

We're going to get more information concerning the lunches served at the school because they've really got something there and we don't want to go off half-cocked, as is our usual way of doing things.

JOKES—THEY MAKE FINE FILLERS

It is reported that when a WPA chief foreman sent word to the big boss that he needed some more shovels for his faithful toilers on the WPA roll, word hurried back from the boss: "Tell the men to lean on each other. We are out of shovels."

Mother—You were a good girl not to throw your banana skins down in the train. Did you put them in your bag?
Jean—No, I put them in the pocket of the gentleman who was sitting next to me.

The head of the house was reading a newspaper article very carefully. Presently he remarked to his wife: "Do you know, dear, I think there is something in what this article says—that the cleverness of the father often proves a stumbling block to the son."

His wife heaved a sigh of relief: "Well, thank goodness," she said, "our Bobby won't have anything to fall over."

"With a single stroke of the brush," said the teacher, taking the class around the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, "Sir Joshua Reynolds, the famous painter, could change a smiling face to a frowning one."

We only hope the editor of "Scat," appearing in the Farmville (Va.) Herald, won't feel too badly because we lifted these jokes.

The fellow who is careless about money matters usually has more cares than money.
