LABOR . . . comes to power

Ever since I began to be interested in politics, something called the "Labor vote" came into every pre-election discussion. Until lately it was merely a vague phrase. Labor was not organized politically. Members of labor unions voted as they pleased and not on orders from their leaders.

The only serious attempt in America to organize Labor as a political unit was the Knights of Labor, predecessor of the American Federation of Labor. In the 1880's, under the leadership of T. V. Powderly, it seemed to make progress for a while, but it was impossible to line up any considerable number of workers to agree to vote the same way.

The American Federation of Labor was founded on a non-political basis. No member was asked what his party allegiance was, nor could any of the unions or the Federation itself be voted as a unit. It put no "Labor" tickets in the field; but its members nominally supported candidates friendly to the wage-earners. Now the political aspect of Labor is changing. With the organization of the C. I. O. the American Labor Party is the political arm of new style labor unions. It is already a factor for politicians to reckon with.

POWER . . . to be reckoned

Organized Labor tested its political power in several local and municipal elections this month. The American Labor Party in New York City, proved itself to hold the balance of power. It did not run its own candidate but endorsed the Republican candidate, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, and elected him. Polling nearly half a million votes, the Labor Party could have elected the Democratic candidate.

In Detroit, where the C. I. O. ran its own third ticket on a platform calling for complete acceptance of the C. I. O.'s right to control work and wages in industry, Labor was badly defeated, though it cast more than 140,000 votes.

Those results were to be expected. Voters as a whole are not ready to turn over their municipal governments to out-and-out labor leaders. Political Labor's tactics, to be successful, will have to follow the line adopted in New York, at least for a time. But by demonstrating ability to muster a block of votes large enough to decide an election, Labor has increased its power to make politicians listen to its demands.

UNIONS . . . class vs. mass

The sudden rise of Labor to political power is due to the success of John L. Lewis in organizing unskilled workers and working groups previously unorganized on the "One Big Union" plan. The Federation of Labor is composed of craft unions, enlisting the skilled workers in distinct trades. The C. I. O. plan takes into one union everybody who works at any trade or no trade at all in a given industry. The same idea was back of the "Wobblies," or Industrial Workers of the World, the labor movement which was making great headway before the World War.

Under the Federation plan labor unions are a sort of aristocracy of skilled workers. Under the C. I. O. plan the unskilled rank and file are brought into fraternity with the most highly paid. The two organizations are bitterly fighting each other. I have no idea which will win or whether both can survive.

I am quite certain, however, that unless the Federation itself goes into politics, the C. I. O.

SHOALY BRANCH

Rev. A. B. Hayes filled his regular appointment at Shoaly Branch last Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Tulbert and family visited Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Spencer a while Sunday night.

Mr. and Mrs. George Carter are moving into this community this week we are glad to note.

will in trench itself in our political system by the power of its mass.

DANGER . . . from irresponsibility

The danger which many fear from the sudden political rise of Organized Labor is that there is no assurance that the rights and liberties of other than union members will be respected or protected, once Labor is in the saddle. I personally know many leaders in finance, business and industry, but I do not know one now living who can honestly be called an enemy of Labor.

All recognize the right of workers to organize, to strike for higher pay or better working conditions, and to receive as high a proportion of the earnings of the concern they work for as the business will stand. But many recent activities of Organized Labor have savored so strongly of lawless disregard of the rights of everybody else and readiness to resort to violence to gain their ends, that the feeling is growing among thoughtful Americans that it is time for Labor organizations to assume responsibility which they now refuse to accept.

RULES . . . should be equal

In all other business affairs except the relations between organized workers and employers there is equal responsibility on both sides. If either party fails to carry out his part of a contract, there are well-established laws and practices to compel him to live up to his agreement or to pay a penalty. If an individual by his actions causes damage or loss to another's property or business he can be punished or made to pay for the damage done.

No such rules apply when one of the parties is a Labor organization. The employer, whether an individual or a corporation, can be held to his agreement. There is no redress if a union violates its agreements.

If Labor is to become a dominant force in politics it ought to be willing to stand on an even footing with everyone else, instead of claiming special privileges denied to others. Whenever Organized Labor accepts the same measure of responsibility which corporations and individuals are compelled to accept, most of the apprehension about Labor in politics will fade away, and with it will vanish most of Labor's grievances.
