

Editor's Note-Senator Reynolds' column for this week is written at John Hopkins Hospital, where the Senator is being given final treatment for an acute ear condition affecting his hearing.

The cause of agriculture is now being ably presented to the Congress. The arguments for and against the proposed farm bill promise to furnish new light on the conditions confronting the American farmers and ways by which those conditions may be corrected. In the first few days of debate, there is evidence that whatever measure may be finally enacted will be drafted on the basis of first-hand data.

In the course of hearings held throughout the country, prior to the convening of the special session, farm witnesses from at least twenty-five states presented their views. Equally as important, these hearings brought to many sections of the country a new realization that the community storekeepers and the comunity bankers can not prosper unless the farmers in the outlying areas share in our economic advantages. Thus the effort now underway in Congress is more than an attempt to write a farm bill—it is an attempt to bring stability to our farm populaion, without which we cannot move ahead as attempt to write a farm bill—it

More than ever before, the de-bate in Congress and the letters from my colleagues concerned with the farm problem, reflect the thought that the American people as a whole can enjoy the economic benefits of our Democracy only in proportion to the extent that our farmers prosper.

Unfortunately, many of the conditions that retard agriculture Unfortunately, many of the ure now under consideration or any other passed at this session.
But the foundation is helder will not be corected in the meas-But the foundation is being wellhope and encouragement and at last the knowledge that the Congress views the problem of agriculture with understanding. Too laid for giving our farmers new many temporary expedients in the past have made many of our farmers rightfully skeptical of legislative remedies for their disproportionate share of our national wealth.

It is already evident that farm bill alone will not help the farmer, unless there is along with it better control of marketing and distribution. It is here that the farmer has been really hurt. It has resulted in the grower who nurses a farm commodity from seed to sale, getting far less for man who sells it. In addition, it is also realized that any permanent help for agriculture will include a plan whereby the farmer will not buy in a protected market and sell in an unprotected market. This, of course, involves tariff changes, always a highly controversial legislative subject.

It might also be pointed out that farmers generally are get-ting a better understanding of ting a better understanding the day by day attempts to give them assistance. The American Farm Bureau Federation and other farm groups, through state organizations, are keeping the individual farmers and their spokesmen advised of developments. As a result, sentiment from "back home" reaches the Capitol almost daily and has an Capitol almost daily and has an important part in guiding the views of members desirous of protection; the best interest of their views of members desirous of pro-tecting the best interest of their constituents.

If I may add a personal note, it is to say that it has been a source of much regret to me that near condition which required immediate attention or the darger of serious trouble later, has prevented me from participating in the preliminary consideration of the farm bill. However, I chall on the floor within a few days and give such humble assistance as I can, to the cause of agricul--our most pressing national
