

THIS AND THAT
If you have ever tried to write anything and at the same time nurse along a full grown case of the plain old stomach-ache, then you may have some faint idea of how we are feeling and how's yourself.

It could be that we are suffering from appendicitis, only our appendix isn't there anymore. Several years ago we suffered acutely from appendicitis—then we had our readers suffering from our description of the operation.

Or maybe we have cancer of the stomach. That's a thought—and a one-way ticket.

But it's better now. Maybe it was brought on by that poetry (?) we wrote here last week. That is, we thought it was poetry but it seems that there's some who don't agree with us. Someone had unitary critics to whom "stuff" appealed far more than "poetry". That's the trouble with the present generation. Too much stuff.

Wonder why it is so many people have to die before they are appreciated? Appreciation to a dead person doesn't do so well. It's when they are living that they should receive the glory they so richly deserve. But don't let all this get your hopes up. We are not planning to pass on so that folks may better realize our claim to fame. We just ain't appreciated in life and don't plan to get ourself appreciated any time soon, we hope, we hope, we hope.

We wrote at length here the other week concerning our ancestors. That rumbling noise you heard was some of them turning over in their grave. The others just didn't give a rip. But when a person gets right down to serious thinking concerning their ancestors and starts bragging about them, isn't it a pity that these defenseless ancestors couldn't express themselves on their descendants?

The next time you hear someone popping off about this uncle or that great-great-grandpa being so wonderful back in his day and time, just think what old grand-pap might say if he could return to earth and see his great-great-granddaughter or grandson. Tsk, tsk, tsk, but we bet he'd feel ashamed of himself in a lot of cases. And we also bet that the ghosts of these ancestors don't sit around in their shrouds and talk about the present generation. If people now have family skeletons, we bet ghosts long gone before have "family descendants" that they keep locked in the closet as close as possible.

HOW MANY ERRORS
Elsewhere in this issue you will find a two-column cartoon entitled "How Many Errors?" This cartoon contains numerous errors made intentionally, and some perhaps that were not intentional. Study it carefully and then make a list of the errors you find. To the person who turns in the nearest correct list in the neatest manner will be given two free passes to the Elk Theatre.

Answers to this cartoon must be in The Tribune office not later than 5:00 p.m. next Tuesday. Winners will be announced in next week's paper, in which another cartoon will be published. So if you miss getting the free theatre tickets this week, try again next week—and look close for errors, for you will find them in the most surprising places.

This feature is going to run as long as it proves popular. If you like things of this sort, jump in.

MORBID CURIOSITY
A woman gets drunk . . . and rubbernecks spring up as if by magic. Not a pretty sight, we'll admit, but why should hundreds flock around with their mouths gaped open and their eyes bulging? When we happened to pass in our car we figured a bad wreck had occurred, judging by the throng, with dozens more heading in that direction and with heads stuck from doorways and windows all along the street. And all because a woman had a wee drap too much. Morbid curiosity—in its worst form.

Miss Marthaleen Davis returned to her school at Mountain Park on Saturday morning after having been at home for several days during the suspension of the school on account of mumps and measles.

Mr. Lee Snow of Taylorsville, is visiting his aunt, Mrs. Mollie Burrus.

Mrs. Brady Norman, Mrs. Joe Booker and Miss Elizabeth Booker, all of Dobson, attended the commencement exercises here.

Mrs. M. A. Townsend of Washington, Mrs. John D. Holcomb and Miss Sara Holcomb of Yadkinville, were recent guests of Mrs. Townsend and Mrs. Holcomb's niece, Mrs. Arthur Graham, and other friends and relatives in the community.

Miss Carrie Coe of Winston-Salem, spent the week-end in Rockford as the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Coe.

The crops are suffering for lack of moisture, but many farmers are setting tobacco and are watering the plants. It is feared that young and tender cover crops which had not yet secured very good root will be badly injured if not killed.

Rev. C. W. Russell conducted a Mother's Day service at the Methodist church on Sunday afternoon at two o'clock. A short program was rendered by members of the Sunday school, which was followed by Mr. Russell's sermon. This was one of five similar services conducted that day on the Dobson Circuit.

"THE MORE SENSES YOU USE--THE MORE CENTS YOU'LL SAVE"

In selecting your new refrigerator let your full senses prevail. Ignore the wonderful claims and glowing words of the salesmen . . . put your purchase to the "five sense" test. Do this and you like millions of others will select a General Electric.

- use your eyes!
Your eyes will reveal the glistening beauty of the smartly styled General Electric. Look at the cabinet, super freezer, mechanism and its many convenient features . . . and you will see the difference.
- use your ears!
The General Electric mechanism with forced-feed lubrication and oil cooling is so extremely quiet . . . that you can hardly hear it run. Listen, too, to the words of praise of General Electric owners.
- use your nose!
You'll have to possess a strong sense of smell to detect any interchange of food odors in a General Electric. The convenient sliding drawers and lovely covered dishes prevent the interchange of odors.
- use your tongue!
A General Electric refrigerator safely guards and retains the appetizing flavors of perishable foods. Left over, when served several days later, taste as they did when first served.
- use your fingers!
And last but not least feel the glistening chrysal surface of the Bonderized all-steel cabinet. It's built like a skyscraper to endure for years. Do all of these, then buy a General Electric and you'll always feel that you have bought the best.

See this refrigerator that started a "save wave" in America! Look at all the price tags—compare values! Check the new General Electric for these multiple savings—in current, upkeep, long life, preserving food, freezing of ice cubes, convenience, capacity, etc. And we believe you will choose a General Electric.
