Merry-Go Round

Underground
In this dizzy town that the Indians sold for $24, half the population seems to be forever scurrying into holes under the ground. The subway entrances swallow enormous quantities of people into its seemingly endless maw.

A good quarter of the city moves from one part to the other between 8:30 and 9:30 in the morning and from 5 to 6 at night. At those times the subways are jammed with people, guards pushing just one more into a mass of humanity which seems already packed tighter than the proverbial sardines.

At least the sardines have a little oil between them—but in the New York subway, rush you're closer to your neighbors than if you were dancing with them.

However it seems to be a great saving in newspapers. At least two-thirds of the subway-farers your reporter has observed seem to be reading someone else's paper over his or her shoulder.

They tell me of one passenger who exhibited what seemed the height of New York nerve. She was a demure miss in her late teens and she was getting the latest on the Czech situation from the newspaper of her next door stamdee. Finally she said, "I'm ready for you to turn the page!"

Outside the new International Casino, and the Paradise there is not one single night club of any importance actually on Broadway now . . . When he walked into the cubbyhole I laughingly call my office, I felt sure that the heavens had descended and the President himself had come to compare his stamp collection with mine.

"I know what you're thinking," he said, "but you're wrong. I'm not Franklin D., but instead plain J. Henry Smythe, Jr."

The man who looks more like the President than the President does himself is a sloganer—and a Republican. He writes slogans for a living—and tries to elect Republican presidents for an avocation.

His business has been good. He was the chap responsible for such stuff as "A Bond Is A Prayer That You Send Over There" for the government during the last World War and "He Kept Us Out Of Worse" for a man called Herbert Hoover during Depression 1.

He is now working on something about "A New Deck To Be Dealt By Republicans To Oppose The New Deal."

People do not necessarily have to be physical acrobats, mental geniuses, or plumed knights to prepare to go to Reno.
