Elkin Has First Snow of Season

Snow, which began to fall in earnest here Saturday night shortly after 9 o'clock, following intermittent flurries throughout the day, covered Elkin and this section with a blanket of white about five inches in depth by Sunday morning.

The snow, which was general throughout the state, was not of sufficient depth to retard traffic to any great extent, although highways were rather dangerous in the forepart of the day.

Official weather report for today (Thursday), was for rain, probably mixed with sleet or snow in the mountains.
