BILL ARP'S WEEKLY LETTER.

CONFEDERATE REUNION AT NASHVILLE DRAWS HIM OUT.

OLD VETERANS MEET AND WEEP.

Not Tears of Sorrow, But Caused by the Recalling of Old Memories of the Battlefield.

My good, happy, genial friend, Charley Lane, delivered a most enjoyable lecture on the analysis of laughter, or "Why Do We Laugh." Now, if he will analyze our tears and tell us why do we weep, we will be better understand another one of the mysteries of our emotional humanity. Why does a man weep when there is no sorrow in his heart—especially an old man—a veteran? If it were not pathetic it would be funny to see the tears in these old soldiers' eyes as they met and marched and listened to the martial music or sat together under the sound of words that came from the lips of old men, eloquent, old comrades in arms—words that awakened soul-stirring memories and quickened into life the hard but heroic scenes that were living facts a third of a century ago. How hard they look—these old soldiers—hard in face and feature but soft in heart. It seems to me I can pick them out from common people. Every wrinkle tells of service, of suffering and disappointment. The bronzo on their furrowed faces has never yet been bleached, and their walk is still a true but tired march. Yes, I can pick them out all around me. Look at old Captain Neal, and Major Fouts, and McCandless, and Durham, and Montcastle. They can't hurry now. Their quick step has gone. They marched and counter-marched, they advanced and retreated, they charged and double-quickened for four long years, until the spring of their instep was worn down to a plane with heel and toe, and now it is a fact that the hollow of the foot makes a hole in the ground.

But why should an old man weep? I remember that when Ben Hill's statue was uncovered and the great speeches were over and Queenie Winnie Davis was brought forward on the platform and presented to us as the daughter of the confederacy by General Gordon, exclamations rent the air and reached the heavens and made the welkin ring. Then everybody cried except those who had no feeling—no emotion—no patriotism. Old General Black was leaning heavily upon me and I felt the quiver of his massive form. He leaned more heavily and I turned quickly to look into his face and saw the tears coursing down as freely as if he were a boy. As I brushed my own away I said: "What is the matter, General? Do you want some water? Are you about to faint?" "Oh, no—no," said he, "just let me alone and hold me up a little. I am feeling good. Thank God for His mercies. I feel like old Nicodemus when he said, 'Now let me die since I have seen thy salvation.'"

The medical books tell us that tears are contagious. We all know that and have experienced it, but ordinarily our tears come from our own emotions and not from another's. I suppose that there were probably ten thousand bona fide veterans at Nashville, and while under the influence of the occasion, the surroundings, the memories of the past and the thoughts that breathed and the words that burned, they all shed tears or felt like it. What a spectacle for northern eyes. What a commentary on northern intolerance. How long will it take to eradicate our love for the lost cause or our admiration for its heroes. Like father, like son and daughter, and it is already transmitted down the line from generation to generation and in a few years more these reunions will be baptized with another name and be called the sons of the confederate veterans. I said that probably there were ten thousand bona fide confederate veterans gathered at Nashville, for it is a fact that our veterans are swiftly passing away. There are not 100,000 now alive—not more than one in seven of all who served. There might have been more, but unpensioned soldiers don't live forever; neither do they multiply as the years roll on.

CORNELL FRESHMEN VICTORIOUS.

Win the Boat Race After a Terrific Struggle.

The freshman boat race over the two-mile course at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., between the Columbia, Pennsylvania and Cornell crews, was one of the most remarkable in the annals of boat racing in this country. Cornell won by three-quarters of a length. Columbia was second by one-third of a length over Pennsylvania. The official time was Cornell 9 minutes 21 1/2 seconds, Columbia 9 minutes 23 1/2 seconds, and Pennsylvania 9 minutes 24 1/2 seconds. It was a very close race until the instant the flag dropped, and the fact that two seconds divided the first and last crews, and that the boats were only a few feet apart at the finish, made the contest a very exciting one. The Cornell crew consisted of the following: J. D. Goddard, who is the manager of Mrs. Jackson's drug business.

The largest concourse of people that ever assembled at a funeral in Burke county was present when the body of Col. S. McD. Tate was laid to rest in Morganton cemetery. The services were held in the First Presbyterian church, and as the body was carried from the church to the cemetery there was a procession nearly a mile in length. The surviving members of the Sixth North Carolina Regiment walked on either side of the hearse, acting as the guard of honor. This was the regiment Col. Tate commanded when he made the famous and gallant charge at Gettysburg, when he passed through a gap in the famous stone wall and with his revolver killed six men. He told this himself and his statement was confirmed. He had flanked a line of men lying down, and emptied every chamber of his revolver as quickly as the weapon could be fired. The Masons attended in a body. The services were conducted by Dr. J. M. Rose, of the Presbyterian church, assisted by Dr. W. H. Leith of the Methodist church.
