as follows: The subject you present will secure my careful consideration. It has already been under consideration_by the Secretary of State. Correspondence in regard to it has been had with our diplomatic and consular representatives and investigation into the facts is now being made by them. It is, of course, proper that this government should ascertain whether any nation with which it holds amicable relations is violating any obligation of internation-al friendship before calling attention to any such matter. In the meantime the law now provides that the officers of the Treasury shall examine into the condition of passengers arriving as immigrants at any port of the United States, and if there should be found any convict, lunatic, idiot or any person unable to take care of himself without becoming a public charge they shall report the same in writing to the colshall not be permitted to land. Looking to Consolidation.

KNOXVILLE, June 23.—At a called meeting of the stock and registered bondholders of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad Com-pany, held at noon to-day, a majority of stock was represented by proxy, none of the heaviest stock and bondholders being present. Full power was granted the directors to make any extension to the system they deem proper, either by construction, purchase or lease, and they were authorized to place a mortgage on such acquisition to provide neans to meet such extraordinary expenses. They were also authorized to issue $10,000,000 in 6 per cent bonds, $3,000,000 in preferred stock, $13,000,000 in common stock, mortgages to be only on the newly acquired property. This is supposed to mean compolidation with the Gould Southwestern system and Memphis and Charleston Railroad Co.

The Mississippi Breaking Through the

Dykes. ST Louis, June 28.—The Madison dyks between here and Alton on the Illinois side of the river broke about 8 o'clock this morning in two places, one break near Mitchell about 12 miles from east St Louis, the other further north, near the head of the dyke, not far from Alton. The crevasses are not very wide yet but are growing rapidly and the water is rushing through them at a fearful rate. It is expected that the entire bottom north of east St Louis, embracing fifty to sixty square miles will be flooded. The farmers are leaving their homes as rapidly as possible, many of them going to Alton and others to different points of the bluffs five or six miles back from the river. The destruction of the crops and damage to farm property will be very great.

A Narrow Escape.

Four little children barely escaped from being precipitated over a bridge twenty feet high. While going out of your city on the Lawyers road I saw several hofses shy off from a hole in the bridge which apans Sugar creek on this road, and one of the horses completely turned around with a two seated phaeton in which there were four children and the driver. One of the children and the driver. One of the front wheels went completely off the bridge, throwing the whole weight of both horse and phaeton on the railing, which fortunately was stout enough to resist the great pressure. For some time it looked as if the whole team, children and all, would investably so over as the horse was rearevitably go over as the horse was rear-ing and plunging, the railing of the bridge being bent as far as it could be without breaking. The whole party was saved by the centre pole giving away thereby allowing the front wheels to pass under. In coming back I noticed that the bridge which spans Phipher's pond is in such a condition that whoever passes over it, does so at i great risk to both occupants and all.
Both these bridges show great negli-gence on the part of some one, as they could be fixed at a cost of about fifty cents a piece. They have not only been the cause of the marrow escape, but have cost this citizen about ten dollars

MacVeagh and James and the Causes of the Star-Route Prosecution.

Ex-Senator Stephen W. Dorsey, who was lately acquitted in the star-route trial, has written a lively letter to Mr Howard C Dickson, of New York, giving a detailed and spicy narrative of the ing a detailed and spicy narrative of the motives for the prosecution, according to his view of the case. He says the original object was wholly political and to destroy him. He had opposed the appointment of MacVeagh and James—the one as Attorney-General and the other as Postmaster-General, and as such holding seats in the Garfield cabinet and the charges against him grew net, and the charges against him grew out of their enmity. He denounced the appointments, he says, "in unmistak-able language," for the reason that "the man from Pennsylvania" (MacVeagh) "was chosen because he was a son-in-law, and the man from New-York (James) was a sycophant, * * neither one of whom could be elected magistrates in the smallest bailiwick of his State." He stigmatized them as "political fungi." He recalls the fact that he took charge of the Garfield presidential campaign, reluctantly as he asserts, and devoted himself "to the profitless, and as it turned out, more than thankless task of discharging this trust for the republican party through the most deperate canvass of its history." When the campaign was over he says, he "declined the greatest reward that could be offered to any citizen by any Executive." He did not obtrude his advice in respect to the make-up of the Gardeld cabinet, and when it was asked and given it was not followed The consequence was, he says, that "Mac-Veagh came into power hating me. As for James" he says, "I did not consider him in the premises, except as the weak and serville tool of Mac Veagh, quick in nothing except the capacity to absort the malice of his master, and skilled in nothing except the subterfuges of Turning next to the star-route accu sations he declares he was actually "amazed" when he was charged with having conspired to defraud the gov-ernment. He appears to have been in this matter, by his own showing, the charlatan or the hypocrisy of a sycothis matter, by his own showing, the victim of his own generosity.

On these generous and unselfish acts the public is given by Mr. Dorsey to understand that MacVeagh and James began, as he describes it, "the prosecution which has just come to an ignominious end. The most miserable creatures that could be caught in the dragnet, snaked across the mouth of the vilest sewer, were seized upon to rake and arrange the country to secure, if posand scrape the country to secure, if pos-sible, something that might be turned sible, something that might be turned into a charge against me. It did not matter what the charge was—any charge—all charges. The dirtlest streams of infamy of the most distant Territories, as well as of this District, were raked up in search of creatures who could be cajoled by flattery, or who would be flattered by the promise of office, or who could be bribed by the mints of coin or promises of a great government, to or promises of a great government, to testify to anything they might be trained to swear to. The body lice of hu-manity are abundant, but not so abun-dant as the swarms of their conjeners, who were swift to feed on the feast provided by MacVeagh and James from the overflow of the treasury. There was not a hamlet in this country where it was believed I had a personal friend but was visited. There was not a per-son with whom I was supposed to have had correspondence but what was approached by one or more of these creatures. No power was left unused and no artifice untried to obtain from such persons any confidential correspondence

As to the charge of fraud, Mr. Dorsey asserts that "Garfield knew it was a lie, Arthur knew it was a lie, MacVeagh knew it was a lie, Brewster knew it was a lie, Bliss knew it was a lie—all of them from the stalled ox feeding at the rich trough of accident to the meanest worm which fed from the refuse swept from behind him, knew it was a lie." In the concluding paragraphs of the letter Mr. Dorsey refers to his acquital.

He says: "To sum up, ic may be remarked that this is supposed to be a free government of an Anglo-Saxon people, founded upon the eternal principles of equal and exact justice to all men, and yet the history of this trial shows that at the very capital of such a shows that at the very capital of such a nation, where the government is a tangible fact and a visible agency, it has been shown that it is possible to organize a conspiracy of vengeance under the mask of a legal prosecution that did not stop in its infernal career until it had exhausted the arts of bribery upon everybody connected with its intended victim, from his associates in business to the cook in the kitchen. And yet it all failed, notwithstanding the raking of agency walley and mining camp and of every valley and mining camp and cannon, every mountain and plain in all the vast region in the West, in the all the vast region in the West, in the attempt to procure something that would gratify the dishonorable ambition of crushed politicians. Notwithstanding the active and willing zeal of the worst wretches that could be gathered from every source, notwithstanding the invasion of the sacred privacy of homely family life, to listen through the half-open doors of whispered confidence—in short notwithstanding every vile art that malignity could devise, and vicious appliance that venality could suggest, the jury system developed twelve citizens who had the intelligence to dissern the truth, the manhood resist the wiles, and the courage to defy the corrupt and desperate power that fy the corrupt and desparate power that exhausted itself to debauch the fountains of justice. In other words two years of time and more than two million dollars of public money have been spent in an effort to wreak upon me the vengeange of ambitions and miserable

The Schools at Shelby.

In addition to the Baptist convention at Shelby last week, the male and female colleges at that place had their commencements. The schools at Shelby though as yet in their infancy are decidedly a grand success, reflecting much credit to the arduous efforts of the educators. The many visitors attending the commencement exercises gave repeated expressions of surprise and of congratulations that Shelby was possessed of so magnificent college buildbuildings and that the people are so fortunate in securing such proficient Principals as Rev. R. D. Mallory and Prof. P. J. King.

A Big Time at Pineville.

Fully 1200 people gathered in Pineville night before last to witness the closing exergises of Prof Reid's school. People from South Carolina, and Sharon, Steel Creek and Providence townships of this county, moved there in a body. The exercises lasted until 1 o'clock at night, and consisted of essays, speeches, dialogues, music, etc. Capt R P Waring, of our city, delivered the closing address which we hear highly spoken of. It was pronounced a capital effort. Mrs Campbell, the musical instructress, deserves credit for the excellence of the musical part of the entertainment, which was really fine. There are eighty pupils at this school, and it gives us pleasure to know that it is growing and prospering. Prof H K Reid is the principal, and Mr Pressly Reid, assistant.

The American and Foreign Bible Soclety is nearly dead. After long preparation and a day's debate, the Baptist Bible Convention, at Saratogo, com posed of delegates from every part of the United States and almost every part of the world decided by a vote of 400 to 86 that the denomination did not need a separate Bible society. This vote brought to an end a conflict of fifty years duration. It was a war not bitter enough to divide the Baptist denomination in such a way as the Congregationalist were divided from the Presbyterians, but it was a war, nevertheless-a war which separated the Baptist Bible workers from those of other Protestant denominations and wrought considerable dissension in the rank of the Baptists themselves.

The Baptist State Sunday school convention which was opened in Shell by last Thursday, came to a close yes terday, and large numbers of the delegates and visitors have passed through the city on the return to their homes Methodist church last Thursday morning at 10 o'cleck, with N B Broughton, of Raleigh, in the chair. to by N B Broughton. The report of J. E. Ray, cerres onding secretary, of Raleigh, showed 727 Baptist Sunday schools in the State, with hopeful prospects of a large increase in the near future. The large number of itors to the convention were amply provided for.

Sheep Slaughtered by Dogs. One of the most striking illustrations of the want of a dog law in this State is brought forward by Mr. Philip Schiff, of this city, who recently embarked in the sheep raising industry. He stocked his farm near the city with a fine flock of sheep and was calculating on making a fine thing of the venture, but he reckoned without his host. The dogs came in the night time and played havoc with his wool and mutton, killing in all thirty-five sheep. The dogs made two raids on the sheep fold, the last time attacking the sheep in the barn yard enclosure, whither they had been driven for protection. Messrs C N and J R Brown, whose farm adjoins that of Mr Schiff, lost twelve sheep by the same set of blood thirsty dogs.
