NOVEMBER.

The brook mid banks of brown slow To peois that seel the coming shill; The shifting, leaden cloud now weeps Then creeps behind the barren hill.

In sombre suit the chilly Day Swift seeks his orient couch afar, And leaves the Night, with frosty sway, To look the trees and lash the bar.

We turn within to firelight's glow, And ripened fruits securely stored: Norfess the chili of coming snow As we surround the festal board.

The gathered friends, the kindred dear, The tale of age, the children's glee, the happy hearm, the honest cheer, The hearty, wholesome revelry—

These, though the year is dying fast,
Still bid us e'et remember
Thanksgiving comes, when toll is past,
To light the drear Nevember.

Joe Brown is Nearing His End.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 29.—Ex-United States Senator Joseph E. Brown, famous as Georgia's war Governor, and perhaps the wealthiest man in the South, is in a critical condition at his home here. The Senator has been in feeble health for many months, suffering from a combination of Bright's disease and rheumatism, but his condition has grown worse in the past few days and is now such as to excite serious apprehension.
