"BREAKING THE HOWE TIES." GRAND CONCERT LAST NIGHT.

A FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLAR PICT

To Be Exhibited in the Art Gallery of the Woman's Expedition-Mr. Harrison's Kind Letter-History of the Picture and the Celebrated Artist Who Painted It.

the Celebrated Artist Who Painted H. For some weeks the offices of the Woman's Exposition have been increas-ing in business activity. Three type-writers have been kept going early and late, beside the work of Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg and other volunteer workers. Such work is slow at first, but increas-es in satisfaction and volume as it pro-sresses. For some days the mails have been bringing promises of exhibit after exhibit, many of them of great value to a community like this. The manag-ers have, however, waited and calmly assured that an early mail would bring the promise of an exhibit that would be to the people an exhibit that would bring them.

This promise came yesterday from Mr. Chas. C. Harrison, provest of the University of Pennsylvania, in a letter, the text of which is as follows: LETTER.

The first numbers a brace wern sung by the Choral Society, the selec-tions being, "Softly Falls the Shades of Evening," by Hatton, and "Spring Song," by Pinsuti. The work was cap-ital. The voices blended, the start and finish was prompt and together, and the shading and phrasing showed care-ful and intelligent training. Miss Anne Atkinson, of Baltimore, the talented daughter of Her. Dr. W. R. Atkinson, of this city, was next on the programme. Her appearance was the signal for a hearty greeting in the form of enthusiastic and prolonged ap-platise. She wore a becoming dress of white silk, and her face, bright and charming, won the day for her before "I am in receipt of your note of Feb-ruary lith. I will answer without de-lay that, if arrangements as to trans-portation, insurance, safe guarding, etc., are made, so that Mrs. Harrison and I may feel assured that no harm will happen to the picture, I will cheer-fully lend "Breaking the Home Ties" for the purposes indicated in your let-ter and which so deeply interest you." This picture is the most popular painting ever exhibited by an Ameri-can. It is said that Mr. and Mrs. Harrison now value it at $50,000. It was painted by the late Thomas Hovenden, for the exhibition at the World's Fair where it attracted more attention from the masses than any other picture. Mr. Hovenden's picture has always brought good prices, he having placed a value of $10,000 upon this before it was fin-

Mr. Hovenden was a man of fine personal traits, the man as ance. well as the artist being depicted in every work that came from his brush. His "When Hope Was Darkest" has attracted much attention and tells a pathetic story of a sailor's life. It was first sold for $5,000. The art-loving world was shocked something like a year ago to learn of the sudden and tragic death of the great artist. Obserer readers will remember the incident Mr. Hovenden was going from his Philadelphia to his home in a neighboring suburb.
