There can be no better medium of advertising than through our columns, as our paper goes daily into the hands of its many readers, thus keeping them ever reminded of our advertising merchants; and as the chief reason for constant advertising is to have the advertisements read as often as possible, the advantage of advertising in THE DAILY ARGUS is at once evident, as our patrons will have their advertisements read as often as possible. Rates furnished on application.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Insurance business—Edmundson & Taylor.
Rheumatism cured by Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

There will be service in St. Mary's church this morning at 10.30 o'clock.

All men are invited to attend the meeting for men only in the Y. M. C. A. rooms this afternoon at 3.30 o'clock. Mr. S. H. Edwards will lead the song service, after which the Secretary will conduct a Bible Class on the "The Kingdom of God."

Our good friend Capt. H. S. Hazell is happy over the visit of his niece Mrs. Jas. P. Allbright, of Durham, who came down yesterday, with her infant daughter Miss Hazell Allbright, named after the genial Captain.

The Teachers' Assembly will convene at the Atlantic Hotel, Morehead, on Tuesday for its annual session. It will be a great and interesting gathering. Those desiring membership tickets should apply at once to Capt. D. J. Broadhurst or to Prof. J. Y. Joyner.

The subject of the pastor's sermon at St. Paul's M. E. Church this morning at 11 o'clock will be, "The last first and the first last." The subject of the evening discourse, at 8.15 o'clock, will be, "Walking together." Sunday School at 8.30 a. m. The public are cordially invited.

The pulpit of the Baptist church in this city will be filled at the morning and evening services to-day, at the usual hours, by our young friend Mr. Junius Millard, who is studying divinity at Wake Forest College. There will be preaching at the Webbville Chapel this afternoon at 3 o'clock, by Rev. C. J. Nelson.

We learn that fifteen general passenger agents of as many different rail roads, from all sections of the country, are now at Morehead, fishing and otherwise enjoying the delightful attractions of that splendid seaside resort. They are the guests of the far-famed Atlantic Hotel, which, under the excellent management of the Messrs. Foster Bros., is going to "draw the crowd" this season.

Regular meeting of Wayne Lodge No. 112 A. F. & A. M. will be held Monday night in Odd Fellows' Hall. This is an important meeting, as the annual election of officers is to take place, and also the F. C. degree will be conferred. All members are notified to attend and a fraternal invitation to visiting brethren is extended.

Our genial and everywhere popular young friend and townsman Mr. Sam Eason was required to give up some "hoodle" to the till of Tribulation Hall last week for letting his fine bay trotter out at a speed that beat 2-50. Sam wanted to see just how fast that animal could go on a good track, so he let her out down the Southern end of West Centre street—and—well, we have said what happened.

It is a real pleasure to us, as it will be also to his many friends, and admirers in this city and section to know that our talented young townsman Mr. J. S. Bassett, who has been teaching in the Durham Graded School for the past two years, has been given a professorship in Trinity College. The faculty of that splendid and growing institution of learning may depend upon it that "Johnnie" will "hold up" his end about as well as any of them, as the old Westerner said of the "little nigger" in Othello, speaking of Booth. The Argus congratulates Trinity College in securing the services of Mr. Bassett, whose intellect, culture and impregnable morals are peerless. He is a young man, moreover, of strong individuality and will not fail to make his impress for good upon the future students of Trinity College.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Miss Bessie Isler is visiting friends in Wilson.

Rev. R. A. Willis went down to Newbern yesterday to minister to his new "charge" to-day.

Mr. W. L. Burch is on a visit to his children in this city, who are with their aunt Mrs. J. E. Crow.

Mr. D. P. Haskitt, we are sorry to know, is confined to his home by sickness. We wish him a speedy recovery.

Mr. Abe Kline, of New York, who has been visiting Mr. Albert Rosenthal in this city, returned home yesterday.

Messrs. "Pete" Sasser and Robert Willis arrived home yesterday from Trinity College for vacation. We wish them a full meed of enjoyment.

Mr. Jim Philips, of Tarboro, a recent graduate from the University, was in the city yesterday en route for home, the guest of Prof. L. D. Howell.

Miss Sue Borden, who is attending the noted Salem Female Seminary, arrived home yesterday for vacation, and her many friends are glad to welcome her return.

Miss Anna Hyman, who graduated with highest honors at Statesville Female Seminary last week, and Mr. Tom Hyman, from Davidson College, arrived home yesterday, much to the pleasure of all their friends here.

Fine Preaching.

On Friday afternoon, at the Presbyterian Church, Rev. Alex. Sprunt preached from the text: "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not bear me; Psalm lxxv: 18. Seldom have we heard a more searching sermon. The preacher charged his hearers, if they were honest in their service of, or search after Christ, to examine themselves more critically than perhaps they had ever done before, in order that they might find whether or not they regarded any iniquity in their heart. All the avenues to their heart, all the approaches to their emotions, were illumined by a flood of gospel light. So that if there was any iniquity there, it must have been discovered. This appeal to his hearers to cast it out, if any there was, was so earnest and tender, that it must have been heeded by the most obdurate.

On Friday night he preached from 2nd Kings, viii: 1 and v; the theme of his discourse being unbelief in God—its heinousness, its prevalence, and the indifference with which it is considered. The great extremity to which the people of Samaria were reduced, as is shown in the text and context, was used with great efficacy in showing the unreasonableness of unbelief in God's power and God's promises; and the fearful consequences of making God a liar.

There will be preaching this morning at 11 o'clock, after which the Lord's Supper will be administered. Preaching at night at 8.15. The public are cordially invited to attend all the services.

THE CRUISE OF THE ALLIANCE.

Gibraltar—Its Fortifications and Tunnels—The Black Watch Regiment—Tangier—The National Salute fired for the Sultan—The Moors' Reception, Scenes in Morocco's Capital—On to Egypt, and the Red Sea.

U. S. S. "ALLIANCE,"
MESSINA; SICILY, May 1, 1890.

My last letter was from Gibraltar, at which place we arrived April 6, a few hours from Malaga, Spain. It was our intention to have sailed from Gibraltar on the 12th, but were delayed several days in order to take our Consul-General over to Tangier, Morocco, and install him with all due naval ceremony.

Gibraltar is a city, or rather a fortress of which I wrote while here on my last cruise and so have not much additional to say concerning it. But few changes have taken place since my last visit. It is, however, a place of great interest and one can always find something to attract the attention in roaming over its streets (or tunnels and alleys which serve as streets) in exploring the Arab quarter and in examining the various batteries all over the place.

The "rock" of Gibraltar was the Northern of the two Herculean Pillars of the ancients, and facing it on the African side of the straits is the Southern one now termed Ape's Hill. Gibraltar is a most remarkable freak of nature. It is a long, tall, steep rock or mountain, isolated from everything else and stands justly as the grim sentinel of the Mediterranean sea. Its Eastern and Northern sides are almost perpendicular and render any approach from those directions, foolhardy. The Northern or Spanish side is cut off from the main land by a most almost as large as a river and is protected by numerous cannons mounted in galleries cut out of the solid rock. These galleries serve as ample protection from an invading land force coming from Spanish territory. Its Eastern and Southern sides are gentle slopes from the water front back about three hundred yards then rise abruptly to the summit of the rock. Upon these two sides the mass of the fortifications are built with heavy masonry batteries placed at short intervals along the sea wall and among the various clumps of trees and underbrush, which serve as screens for them.

The rock is tunnelled and caverned out so that the garrison can communicate from one point to another without exposure to the fire of an enemy. The British Government has lately appropriated $16,000,000 to re-fortify the rock, and at present several heavy batteries are being rapidly pushed forward upon the East of the ridge. The greatest secrecy is maintained in connection with the building of these batteries. Sentries are posted all over the rock with orders to allow no one to go near the works, and so all we can see is the soldiers daily at labor upon the summit and the material ready to be transported up to them.

The British officials at Gibraltar were very attentive and tried to be as pleasant as their nature would allow them to be during our stay in Gibraltar; so we had a number of dinners and entertainments, the latter of which were, however, very hard to appreciate. It requires a special education to appreciate an English joke, as those who attempt to read "Punch" must admit. It takes the average Englishman a good while to fully realize a joke, as was evidenced by their returning a day or so afterward and saying: "I say, hold chappy, that joke you made the other day his little hamming, don't you know?"

I attended several of the regimental drills and think that that of the 42d Highlanders, the famous "Black Watch" Regiment, was the best drill it has ever been my fortune to see. This regiment is uniformed in the Highland costume, consisting of a military jacket, a short petticoat reaching about four inches above the knee, and made of the plaids from the clan from which the regiment is entitled, a sort of hairy thing like a goat beard hanging in front from the belt and called a "sporran," bare knees, stockings reaching about four inches below the knees, and white leggings. It is a queer ring, but looks very well when a body of men are drilling together. The principal part of the music of this regiment consists of bag pipes and the noise they made was simply horrible.

We remained at Gibraltar until the 20th of April and then taking the new Consul-General to Morocco, Mr. Matthews, on board, we proceeded to Tangier and duly installed him in office.

On our arrival in Tangier we fired the national salute of 21 guns for the Sultan and it was returned by the Moorish fort; then we fired a salute in honor of the Consul-General, and this also was returned by the fort. My visits to Tangier previously were during the time our relations with Morocco were quite strained, and hence we were treated as enemies rather than as friends of the Moors, but this time our reception was quite the contrary.

After touching at Gibraltar to land our disabled sailor, we proceeded along the African coast to this place. We will stay several days in Messina and then proceed to Alexandria, Egypt, perhaps, touching among the Greek Islands for target practice.

Already the weather is getting somewhat warm, and we begin to dread and look forward without pleasure to our journey through the Red Sea, where the winds from the desert are so hot as to almost shrivel the skin. Still we have no doubts as to our sustaining it till our arrival at Aden.

principally "yankee doodle." Imagine what the sight and feelings underwent when pressing us on all sides were half naked, well dressed, bare-headed, etc., Moors and Arabs yelling and hooting in Arabic at the tops of their voices their shouts of welcome, and going through all sorts of antics. They kissed the Consuls' clothes, knelt down, etc., pushed and jammed us so that the lace warts from our trousers, epaulets, knocked askew, feet trod upon, and numerous other supposed pleasant things heaped upon us.

The city of Tangier is a walled town built between and partly upon two hills in the form of an amphitheatre, and is the diplomatic capital and seaport of Morocco. The houses are all of stone, covered with white stucco, and have windows like a jail and only about 8x12 inches in size, while the doors are just about large enough for one person to push through. The streets, or rather lanes, are narrow, crooked and filthy. Many of them are so narrow that two persons cannot walk abreast. The houses are built or rather walled over and up these streets, so that the sunlight is mainly excluded, and gives them the appearance of tunnels or cellar passages. There seems to be no system of constructing dwellings, and each one seems to be different and dirtier, if such is possible, than its neighbor. The interior of the houses owned by the richer Moors or Jews is generally remarkably handsome and neat, the walls and marble columns being always inlaid with Moorish work in stones, gems, or glass. It is a difficult matter to describe a rich Moor's house—it must be seen to be appreciated. These houses are built for comfort and idleness, and inside the Moorish ladies may be seen dressed in the bright and gaudy colors they so prize. On the streets their costumes are quite different, as they wrap themselves up in a sort of blanket concern, completely enveloping them from head to foot, and to render their features more secure from view they grasp a handful of their hood and hold it in front of the face, thus leaving only their eyes and tips of their fingers showing, both of which are seen to be deeply dyed with henna. The richer Moorish women wear a lace covering to conceal their features. The Jewesses do not conceal their features, and thus it is an easy matter to see how remarkably pretty, as a rule, they are.

The Arabs and Moors, from the interior, come to Tangier to market their wares on Thursdays and Sundays. They generally bring their families and always come armed, as they never part with their rifles, knives and scimitars for fear of being murdered or robbed.

The Moors marry about the age of twelve, and it is no unusual sight to see parents with children apparently as old as themselves, and still quite young. The giving and taking in marriage of the women is looked upon just about as so much merchandise. Still the wife has some rights, and by the proper use of money, if such she possesses, will ordinarily insure her the exercise of these rights. I was told by a Spanish lady that her two servants, one a girl of 10 and the other aged 12, were both married and now divorced. In their cases, she informed me, that she gave twenty pesetas to the younger girl, who went to a Moorish Magistrate and informed him that their husbands did not provide them with beds nor with the necessary street costume, and at the same time presented the pesetas to the Magistrate, who at once freed them of their matrimonial bonds. Once divorced they are at perfect liberty to marry again, and the fact of being divorced women offers no detriment to them in the eyes of the men.

After touching at Gibraltar to land our disabled sailor, we proceeded along the African coast to this place. We will stay several days in Messina and then proceed to Alexandria, Egypt, perhaps, touching among the Greek Islands for target practice.

Already the weather is getting somewhat warm, and we begin to dread and look forward without pleasure to our journey through the Red Sea, where the winds from the desert are so hot as to almost shrivel the skin. Still we have no doubts as to our sustaining it till our arrival at Aden.
