THE ARGUS, DAILY AND WEEKLY.

There can be no better medium of advertisement than through our columns, as our paper is read by the hands of its many readers, and is the chief reason for the success of our advertising. It is to have the advertisement read as often as possible, the advantage of advertising in THE DAILY ARGUS is at once apparent, as our patrons will have their advertisements read almost every day. Rates furnished on application.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

HAVE YOU paid your city dog tax? If not, look out for your canine, for the "purple" days whose tax is not paid are numbered.

We do not remember to have yet made the item that the entire fruit crop of this section is a failure this year. It was killed in the germ by the late frost.

DON'T forget the preaching at the Presbyterian Church this afternoon at 4:30 and to-night at 8:15. The opportunity of hearing the Gospel preached with so much earnestness and force does not present itself often.

A GRAND colored excursion, under the management of the most reliable colored citizens of Goldsboro, will be run from this city via Wilson, to Fayetteville on Friday next. It will be, of course, a popular and an enjoyable affair.

We inadvertently spoke of Mr. W. F. Kornegay as the incumbent chairman of the Board of County Commissioners in making the railroad tax item in yesterday's ARGUS. Mr. Kornegay's term of office does not begin until next December. Mr. E. B. Borden is still chairman of the Board.

The Rifles will hold their regular weekly drill to-night. The State Guard encampment is drawing near and it is important that these drill meetings be attended by the full membership of the company if the boys would have the Rifles sustain its brilliant reputation as a company at encampment. Let every member of the company be at the drill in their armory to-night.

By special request we publish this morning a synopsis of the proceedings of our late county convention, for the information of a large number of new readers of THE ARGUS, who did not see the issue of the paper immediately after the convention, containing an account of the proceedings. THE ARGUS goes forward, and always considers the desires of the people.

INVITATIONS are out to the marriage of Miss Orah J. Crawford, of this city, to Dr. Adam A. Klutz, of Chapel Hill, the ceremony to take place in the Goldsboro Baptist church, on Thursday, June 26th, at 2 o'clock p. m. The bride and groom have a wide circle of friends in this city who will witness the ceremony with interest and the best of good wishes.

HIS EXCELLENCY Governor Fowle, who has been quite unwell for several days, passed down to Morehead yesterday afternoon, to get the benefit of the invigorating salt air, under the advice of his physician. The Governor takes an active interest in the Teachers' Assembly, as in all things else that tends to the upbuilding and betterment of North Carolina.

THE first cotton bloom of the season from Lenoir county is reported to us by Mr. Noah House, from the LaGrange section, who is one of the most extensive farmers in that good old county of energetic and progressive farmers, and as successful farmer is without a superior in the State. Lenoir crowded Wayne close on the first cotton bloom, there being only one day's difference between Mr. De H. Hooks and Mr. House, but, as usual, Wayne "got there" first.

Mr. E. A. WRIGHT, of this city, has succeeded in securing the agency in the counties of Wayne, Johnston and Harnett for the great work entitled, "Jefferson Davis, Ex-President of the Confederate States" - a memoir by his wife. Those who desire the work - and all should have it - can obtain it as soon as it is issued from the press by giving their subscriptions to Mr. Wright. The book is a standard life of the great Southern Statesman, Mr. Davis, from the cradle to the grave.

Wayne County Convention.

Owing to the fact that a good many persons have expressed a desire to see the proceedings of the County Convention held for the purpose of selecting delegates to the State, Judicial and Congressional Conventions, held in Goldsboro on the 8th day of June. We have decided to republish them, and give a fuller report of the speeches made on the occasion in order that our readers who were not present may see not only how C. B. Aycock, Esq., stands upon the questions of vital importance which are before the people for solution, such as the tariff, the national banking system, the coinage of silver and the sub-treasury bill; but also how he stands in the estimation of his people who know him best.

I. F. Dortch, Esq., having, as chairman of the County Executive Committee, called the convention to order, and having stated the purpose of the convention, and the number of votes to which each precinct was entitled, requested the members of the press to act as Secretaries. On motion of Mr. A. J. Harrell the temporary organization was by a unanimous vote made permanent. Dr. J. B. Kennedy introduced the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted.

RESOLVED, The Democratic party of Wayne county in convention assembled again affirms its adherence to the principles of the party, State and National, under which in times past the country enjoyed so great a degree of prosperity, and under which the agricultural classes were prosperous and happy.

2. That we deplore the continuance in power of the sectional Republican party, with its train of evil consequences which have ever marked its sway, with its partisan legislation, its ruinous financial policy and its unjust and iniquitous tariff laws, and pledge our united efforts to drive it from power.

3. That we favor equal and exact justice to all men, and we deplore the fact that the Republican party has been, during its entire course, under the control and influence of the moneyed classes of the North and always responsive to their demands, and against the interests of the great body of the people - maintaining its influence by the most barefaced fraud and bribery.

4. That we favor the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

5. That we favor the removing of the federal tax on State Bank circulation.

6. That we favor a change in the principle and amount of taxation; a change that will lower taxes not only to a revenue basis, but even lower, and make up any deficiency in revenue by a graduated income tax; in other words we demand a system of taxation that will not bear more heavily upon the poor than the rich, but which will be just to all our citizens.

7. That we favor the abolition of the National banking system and the substitution of a better system; the establishment of a system that will take the control of the money of the country out of the hands of the few; a system that will give us an elastic and flexible currency, one that will contract and expand exactly with the annual products of the country, thereby furnishing a just and fixed measure of their value, and that the sub-Treasury bill lately introduced in both Houses of Congress comes more nearly effecting this than any other measure yet offered, and that we approve of and endorse said bill.

Mr. C. B. Aycock having been vociferously called for, came forward and made a ringing speech. He stated that it was somewhat embarrassing for him to speak as he was known to be a candidate for Congress. That he was sorry to learn that there was some opposition to him on account of his profession. That he was a Democrat, born a Democrat, raised a Democrat, and expected to die a Democrat. That some of the great questions of the day, were the tariff, the national banking system, the coinage of silver and the sub-treasury bill. That upon all these questions he stood squarely upon the platform adopted by this convention. He spoke of the unfairness of the tariff, the inequalities it necessarily created among the different classes of our people - the rich growing richer, the poor poorer. The National banking system he showed was owing to its very nature unsuited to the conditions of our people. That silver was one of the natural materials best suited to the uses of a circulating medium. That it was one of the recognized mediums of exchange used by the fathers of the republic; and was in use as money during the most prosperous days of the country. That its demonetization was a great crime against the great portion of our people. That it necessarily unduly depreciated the values of property and appreciated the value of money. That this was made manifest in the fact that although we had since the war paid several billions on our national debt, that it would take more cotton to pay off the national debt to-day than it would have taken before there was a cent paid on the debt in 1865. That the moneyed barons who controlled the Republican party had thus by legislation given to this debt the character of perpetuity, from the fact that the longer it stood, although it was being paid off at a rapid rate, it grew more valuable, when considered in relation to this great money crop of the country, and so with relation to all other agricultural products.

He said that the Federal tax on the circulation of State banks ought to be repealed, in order that the States might, if they saw fit, authorize the establishment of such banks of issue as the necessities of their people demanded. He expressed his sympathy with the farmers in their struggle against the unequal and unjust legislation of the Republican party. He said that he was born and raised on the farm, and that all his kindred were engaged in farming; that he was acquainted with their troubles, and if he was chosen to represent this district in the Congress of the United States he would do all in his power to secure legislation that would make the condition of the farming class as desirable as that of any other class. That he felt the need of a greater volume of money, and a currency of more flexibility than any we now have in order to enable the farmers of the country to move their crops without sacrifice. That the sub-Treasury bill was, in his opinion, the best plan that had yet been suggested, and that, if elected to Congress, he would give it his hearty support.

The speech was received with great favor by the delegates and the large crowd of people of all callings who were in attendance.

Mr. J. W. Bryan, Secretary of the County Farmers' Alliance, offered a resolution instructing the delegates to the Congressional convention to cast the vote of this county for Mr. C. B. Aycock. Dr. J. E. Person opposed the resolution, on the ground that he favored sending a man to Congress for a long term of years in order that he might exert influence. He said that this was the trying hour of his life. That he loved and honored Mr. Aycock; that there was no man whom he would more readily trust. That he was bound to him by all the ties of gratitude, for that when he (Person) was a poor boy without any home to cover his head, Mr. C. B. Aycock's father gave him a home and started him in life. Mr. J. W. Bryan in support of his resolution said that there were some who seemed to think that it was the duty of Alliance men to support only Alliance men for office. That this was a mistake. The Alliance only required that the men whom its members supported for office should be worthy of the confidence of their fellowmen. That Mr. Aycock fully met all the requirements of the Alliance; that he was a man they all knew, and as for himself he would sooner trust Mr. Aycock than himself. That his heart was in the Alliance work; that his sympathies were entirely with the farmers; that his greatest ambition was to raise his two boys up to be the best farmers in Wayne. That he was willing to trust Mr. C. B. Aycock to represent him in Congress, and so were the other farmers of Wayne.

Mr. I. F. Dortch then, in a very feeling manner, alluded to the confidence - personal, political and professional, that the people of Wayne had always reposed in his father. He assured them that in his last years this perfect confidence was "as sweet incense to his simple soul." He availed himself of this his first opportunity to thank them for this confidence. He then alluded to the expressions of confidence he himself had always received at their hands. He paid a touching tribute to the father of Mr. C. B. Aycock and his family, whom we all knew, trusted and loved. He said that he knew Mr. C. B. Aycock well; that he would trust him blindly; that there was not a man in the county who would not trust him with every thing he held dear, yea, even with his life itself. The only possible objection that could be conceived to the resolution, was that Mr. Aycock was a lawyer. He then, in a striking manner, drew a short sketch of the historical account of the efforts of the lawyers in favor of human freedom. He appealed to the experience of the people of Wayne to know whether the lawyers of this county had not been true to the trusts that had been confided to them?

Mr. A. J. Harrell, President of Cotton Blossom sub-Alliance, said

I am a farmer or nothing, I am an Alliance man of the Alliance men, I have felt this prejudice against lawyers, I have thought and said that the lawyers were getting too much, but when I come to business, though, I always try to act as a man of sense and free from prejudice. If I have a case in court, I want to win it, and in order to do so I usually employ a lawyer who has training, learning, influence and eloquence to plead my case for me.

In this matter of reduction of the tariff, free coinage of silver, and the adoption of the sub-treasury plan, we have a case of gigantic proportions, and vast importance. We send a man to Congress, and who does he meet there? two or three hundred of the shrewdest yankee lawyers.

I think the part of wisdom is to send a lawyer there who by instinct education and training will be able to influence these lawyers and gain our case. We are willing to trust Mr. Aycock with our property, our reputations and our lives, and why not trust him with our legislation. If we think he is the man best fitted to get what we want out of Congress, and we do to a man, let's send him to Congress to plead our case.

Dr. J. B. Kennedy, who is a prominent Alliance man in Grantam's township spoke in the same strain.

At the close of the speeches it was apparent to all that if there had been any opposition to Mr. Aycock among any of the delegates that it had entirely melted away, and the convention was eager for the adoption of the resolution. However, to satisfy the consciences of some who were opposed to instructions, Mr. H. J. Ham, an Alliance man, moved to substitute for Mr. Bryan's resolution the following, which was seconded by Mr. Geo. W. Best and accepted by Mr. Bryan and unanimously adopted, with much applause and enthusiasm.

The Democratic County Convention of Wayne county, proud of the abilities and character of Chas. B. Aycock, Esq., of Wayne county, and recognizing him as eminently qualified to represent this district in Congress, do hereby endorse and recommend him for nomination for Congress from the 3rd District.

Wayne county is united and enthusiastic for Mr. Aycock.
