THE ARGUS, DAILY AND WEEKLY.

There can be no better medium of advertisement than through our columns, as our paper is read daily into the hands of its many readers, and is kept ever fresh and up-to-date by our advertising agents, and as the chief reason for our success in advertising is to have the advertisements read as often as possible, the advantage of advertising in THE ARGUS is at once evident, as our patrons will have their advertisements read almost every day. Rates furnished on application.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

THE service in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church this morning at 11 o'clock, will be conducted by Rev. Israel Harding.

THERE will be a term of Inferior Court for this county in October, for the trial of criminal actions and civil causes.

It is thought that the equinoctial storm is upon us. It is time for it, and certainly is the weather fully up to all requirements.

THE Hebrew New Year 5651, will be ushered in to-morrow. It will be generally observed by Goldsboro's citizens of the faith of Israel. THE ARGUS tenders them its hearty wishes for happiness and prosperity.

ALL the contiguous counties had hosts of representatives here yesterday, and they all seemed to be impressed with Goldsboro's fresh and progressive and growing importance as a great city and trading centre. Thus, we go forward.

SENATOR VANCE left the city yesterday afternoon for the western part of the State. He was greatly pleased with his reception. The people from everywhere who had assembled here to greet him made him feel the sincerity of their regard for him, which was inexpressibly gratifying to him, as he so expressed to the gentlemen of the committee of reception.

THE management of the A. & N. C. R. R., under President Chadwick, during the year that he has been in charge, has been so economically administered and has been attended with such success, that the road has found itself able to purchase two new locomotives. The order has already been given and the engines are to be ready by the first of December.

OWING to failure to make connection at Atlanta Bishop Galloway will not arrive in our city until this afternoon at 3 o'clock, consequently the dedicatory service and sermon at St. Paul's M. E. church will take place at the evening service at 8 o'clock, and the communion service, which was to have been held to-night, will be held immediately after the 11 o'clock service this morning. The delay of the Bishop simply transposes the service.

THE well remembered and so much enjoyed Fair News, that appeared last year in the interest of Goldsboro's Great Fair, with the energetic secretary of the association, L. T. H. Bain, "on deck" as editor, will be published again this season, in two editions. The first edition will be issued the latter part of this week, and will tell you all about our coming big Fair, Oct. 21-23. Don't fail to secure a copy. It will be the handsomest advertising sheet ever published in the State under Fair auspices.

It is with inexpressible regret, and with the deepest sympathy for the bereaved husband and two motherless children, that we chronicle the death of Mrs. Swift Galloway, which occurred at their home on John street Friday night, after a protracted illness and gradual decline of several months. God knows best, and He gives succor to those who trust in Him, though He chasteneth them; and the motion of His love is equal to the healing of all wounds. This is the comfort we would offer this morning to those who sit and sorrow in the shadow of death, and feel so keenly the great and irreparable bereavement that has come to them. The funeral will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock from St. Stephen's Episcopal church, of which Mrs. Galloway was a life time member.

VANCE IN GOLDSBORO.

The Great Senator Draws a Great Crowd and Thrills their Hearts, as of Yore, with the Fire of Patriotism and with the Love of Democratic Institutions.

At length the people of this section, who so love and revere and trust implicitly the great man, have again had the pleasure of seeing Zeb Vance and hearing him speak. The crowd that gathered here yesterday to hear him was the most representative gathering of the people of Eastern North Carolina that we have ever seen brought together at any one time—and it showed and impressed one, above everything else, that never before have our people been so thoroughly united and alive to their political interests throughout Eastern North Carolina as they are at this time. They had come here for 35 miles around the country, and from along every line of Railroad for sixty miles—farmers, merchants, lawyers, doctors, men of every avocation in life, and in the aggregate they made an immense audience. And to these Senator Vance spoke for two solid hours of uninterrupted talking, in that straightforward, manly, characteristic style of his which carries conviction of his sincerity and honest purpose in every word. It was a great speech, and long will it be remembered by and impress itself upon our people and our politics.

He opened with a review of the present political manoeuvres of the Republican element in Congress, showing how, through their Force Bill and their odious tariff discriminations, they are bending every energy to revive the sectional prejudices of the war, threatening the peace and good will and liberty of the South. He urged, therefore, that never in the whole history of the country was there a time when unity among the whole people of the South was so important as during the impending political crisis. And he sought to impress upon his hearers the peculiar necessity and importance of this desired unity among the people of the South, because the Force Bill and the Tariff discrimination are all against the South, and yet in the face of this emergency, he said, "there are new movements on foot, and being engendered in the South which if not wisely and prudently directed will result most disastrously to this section, and threaten the disruption of the Union."

He addressed himself to the financial policy of the government, and urged that under this policy for twenty-five years, the rich have grown richer, the poor, poorer, the corporations more powerful, the people—the masses, less independent and weaker, until at length the products of labor have ceased to enrich the laborer, but go, instead, to swell the coffers of corporations and tariff-protected trusts, that "corner" the markets and buy politicians to make laws in their favor, under the shadow of the protecting wing and through the power and sympathy and interest of the Republican party.

In this connection he dwelt at length and most lucidly on the silver question; showing that the demonetization of silver was one of the greatest misfortunes that could have befallen this country. He said that silver had always been the money of the common people, while gold was the money of Kings and Princesses. He said that the bill demonetizing silver, was one of the most deftly insidious bills in its drafting that had ever been known in Congress—that it passed both houses and was signed by President Grant without their comprehending its full purport, otherwise it would never have been enacted. But such power did the gold advocates attain immediately thereafter, by the demonetization of silver, that they have controlled every subsequent congress, and only a limited coinage of silver is all that its advocates have been able to secure. Hence the farmer has been kept scanty of money, the price of farm products has been kept low, and under the protection of the tariff the necessities of life and manufactured articles have been held up to the highest possible notch.

He went back to the very earliest institution of the tariff; showing how it had its incipency in the desire of "The Fathers" to protect infant industries, "few and far between" that were struggling in this country against the long established manufactories of Europe. It was never intended that the tariff should be permanent or all-encompassing, or a detriment to the masses. A tariff for revenue only is the spirit of the Constitution and the policy of the Democratic party—and the abuse of the early leniency of our government, whereby a great "protective" tariff has been engendered and sustained to the enrichment of corporations, trusts and the classes, and to the impoverishment of the masses, was never intended and must be stopped.

Under this system the spirit of protection has crept into all departments of industry until it encompasses every species of manufacture; while the farmer, who is thereby made to buy in a protected market is put in competition with the free markets of the world in the sale of his stuffs the price of which is fixed in Liverpool, and where he meets the competition of the cheapest labor of all countries, and has no "protection." He is made to sell by the prices fixed in Liverpool, but he cannot buy anything in Liverpool and bring it in here for his use without paying to his home government, under the existing Republican tariff, a heavy duty for the "protection" (?) of American labor. For instance, if the farmer were to buy his cotton ties in Liverpool he would have to pay 108 per cent duty on them before he could bring them in here for use. That is he would have to pay to our government, for the protection of home manufacturers, the full price of the cotton ties on this market and $8.00 additional, although he may have purchased them in Liverpool 80 per cent cheaper than the price of them at home. The Senator cited many such instances of the fearful operations of the "protective" tariff; but it would be utterly useless for a newspaper report to attempt to chronicle them. He stated that Democrats want a tariff for revenue only—"equal rights to all and special privileges to none." He cited the recent instance in Congress where every Democratic Senator voted with the Republican Senators of the West and Northwest, to put binders' twine—a jute manufacture largely used by the western farmers in binding wheat—on the free list, and immediately thereupon he moved to put jute bagging, used entirely by southern farmers for their cotton, on the free list, and every Republican Senator that voted to put binders' twine on the free list voted against Senator Vance's motion in behalf of the Southern farmer, except one. These are the schooling facts that are leading the people to realize where they are and what they must do to be saved.

After showing such facts and tendencies and designs of the Republicans, the Senator said, "unless ye abide in the Democratic ship you can never be delivered from the house of bondage and be secured the privileges of free men."

He reviewed his position on the sub-Treasury Bill, which, through his published letter to President Carr of the State Alliance and his more recent communications to the papers, is pretty generally known. He has, as he stated, and he cited all his votes in the Senate in proof, the interest of the farmers at heart, and is ceaseless in his efforts and thoughts for their relief. He avowed his interest in all his people without regard to class, and yet, he said, he felt a peculiar interest in the welfare of the farmers, because they are the most legislated against, and up to recently the most disinherited, while at the same time they have always been the peculiar instruments in the providence of God in answering the prayers of His people—"give us this day our daily bread." He had always urged the farmers to organize—and now that they are organized he has no fear that as a great body they will turn against him after his long years of unrebuked and constant service, during which time no shame has come to his name.

He cited the fact that when he was first called to the service of the people 36 years ago, as State Representative from the county of Buncombe, he was associated there with such men as, Gov. Jno. M. Morehead, W. A. Graham, Jno. A. Gilmer, Chas. F. Fisher, Jno. Gray Bynum, Wm. Shipp, Thos. S. Ashe, David Outlaw, Joshua Taylor, Wm. T. Dortch, and other distinguished men whom he mentioned, and every one of whom, he said, "have passed over the river to rest beneath the shade of the trees that dot the plains of Eternity."

In reviewing those 36 years, with the vicissitudes of the war and the subsequent ordeals of his people, all of which he shared and fought valiantly always to alleviate, he touched at times the topmost heights of pathetic eloquence that moved the hearts of his hearers almost to worship of the man.

He placed himself squarely on the Democratic platform adopted by the late State convention, and when Zeb Vance takes a stand and avows himself, you can count on him. Consequently, the platform is all right, Zeb Vance is all right, also.

Seven Springs.

Mr. Editor: I have just returned from a delightful visit to Seven Springs. While there I enjoyed the charming hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Simmons. This delightful hotel, together with the continued improvements to the property made by the enterprising monied syndicate now in charge of it, will soon make it one of the most popular resorts in North Carolina. It is to be cordially commended both to those who seek health and those in search of pleasure.

It will be a matter of special interest to the public to know that the hotel will be kept open to visitors all winter, and the genial proprietor with his charming wife will have a cordial welcome for all who desire to test the healing water of Seven Springs.

It will be a matter of interest to our Baptist friends to know that the syndicate has generously donated a splendid lot for the erection of a Baptist Church, and it will not be long before we will have an established organization there.
