NUMEROUS DEATHS AND MARRIAGES

It is announced a most remarkable fact that George E. Pullman started in life without a cent in his pockets.

A great problem seems to be solved. The person who operates a typewriting machine is now called a typist, and the day is passed when a man will compromise himself by telling his wife that his typewriter is stubborn and needs regulation.

The dissolution of that very clever literary partnership of which M. Chatman was a member, by the death of that gentleman, is a matter of no little significance.

A Massachusetts genius has invented an electric man, the apparatus presenting quite a human appearance and wheeling a perambulator with the utmost industry and regularity.

If the quail, the partridge and the prairie chicken of the United States read the newspapers, they must be greatly delighted to notice that movements have begun almost simultaneously for the organization of three trusts which shall control respectively the powder, shot and cartridge markets.

The coroner's jury of the far west is a very originally constituted body, and one should not be surprised when it says original things. Thus, there could not well be anything more delicate than the expression of the jury which last week passed upon a case of lynching and brought in a verdict that the deceased "came to his death by strangulation at the hands of a person or persons unknown."

What ambitious lawyer of any sense would settle in a town of but 540 inhabitants! It is not likely that more than 100 of these would be producers, and it must be a very quarrelsome community 100 active adults that would provide a living, to say nothing of a fortune, for a lawyer.

It has been clearly proven by certain recent experiments, that it is possible to develop typical cases of delirium tremens in dogs. The animals go through all the stages characteristic of the disease in the human animal, and are relieved by similar treatment.

It is interesting to observe how numerous are the homicides in the Northern and Middle Western States, in which the lover murders his sweetheart either for preferring the society of a rival, positively rejecting his own suit for objections personal to himself, such homicides occur so often that they have come to be regarded as a distinct class of murders.
