BE PATIENT AND BE PURE.

BY GRANT F. ROBINSON.

What matter if the clouds are dark
That neither over thy head
If hunger stare thee in the face,
Thy friends and fortune fled?
Have faith and pray unto thy God
To aid thee to endure,
And through the darkest hours of life
Be patient and be pure.

Temptation passes by the strong
And yields the weak and frail,
And seems to know the day and hour
When we are prone to fail.
But spurn the tempter and his train,
To those who can endure God's strength will come, then heed thy words—
Be patient and be pure.

Spurn the smooth "p and lyce tongue
That tells thee, "Will thy purse
Need not the means, but fill it well
No matter what may come."
And stand erect in meekness's might,
The Argus to endure,
With this thy motto, all through life,
Be patient and be pure.
How to read.

FRESH FUN.

The Sharp and Witty Sayings of the Press Men.

"I think photography is very interesting," she said to a young man who is in that line.

"Yes; it is."

"I should like to have you make a picture of me."

"With pleasure."

"How would you prefer to take me?"

He looked at her with a face that showed deep thought and then replied, slowly but in a firm voice:

"For better or for worse, by all means."—Washington Post.

Citizens—Did you go and thrash that editor for printing those things about you?

Citizen—I went to the office,
but I couldn't find him.

"Whom did you find there?"

"No one but a great big bull-necked fellow who pretended he was responsible for that article, but I knew from his looks that he couldn't write."—New York
Weekly.

"How do you like your new typewriter, Gazzam?"

"Very well, Maddox, except for one thing."

"What is that?"

"The blamed machine doesn't know how to spell."—Munsey's
Weekly.

"Barthleson," inquired a fellow reporter, "what have you been doing in the managing editor's room?"

"Been holding a consultation
with him."

"What about?"

"About the management of the paper."

"Any change in its policy contemplated?"

"Yes. That's what the consultation was about."

"What was decided upon, if you don't mind telling me?"

"It was decided," said Barthle-son, twisting his mustache gloom-ily, "that the paper didn't need me,
on its payroll any longer."—Philadelphia Press.

"Mary," said the negro minstrel,
sitting on his knees before the fair one, "Mary, I love you! Will you be mine?"

"Oh, Thomas," murmured Mary,
"perhaps you do not mean it! Perhaps you are trifling with me. How do I know? Men are such deceivers!"

"Darling," he replied, "I could not be so base! I am not a saint,
I know. I might be better, but in spite of all my faults I am not so black as I am painted."

Mary swooned at the joke.—
Lawrence American.

"Excuse me," said a man who entered the office with an air of indulgent and suave expostulation,
"are you the man who wrote up
the strike?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, permit me to say you rather misrepresented us when you said we were contending for shorter hours. I have made a careful examination of the general feeling, and I find that there is not a man who wants less than the customary sixty minutes to the hour."—

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth.
It relieves the little sufferer at once. It produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to take. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels and is the best new remedy for diarrhea, whether arising from teething or other cause. Twenty-five cents a bottle.
