There can be no better medium of advertisement than through our columns, as our paper reaches the hands of its many readers, being merchants, and as the chief reason for constant advertising is to have the advertisements read as often as possible, the advantage of advertising in THE DAILY ARGUS is that once printed, it remains in the hands of our readers, and is read every day. Rates furnished on application.

LOCAL BRIEFS.
This is the Last Day of registration. If your name is not on the books by sunset this evening you cannot vote on election day.

MANY men who have heretofore voted the Republican ticket have become disgusted with the extravagance and corruption of Republican misrule, and will this year vote with the Democrats. Many were compelled to this course by evidences of incompetency exhibited in county and State Republican nominations.

The remains of Miss Annie Moore, which arrived on the Raleigh train yesterday afternoon accompanied by her brother-in-law, Prof. P. Olaxton, were followed to their last resting place in Willow Dale Cemetery by a large concourse of our citizens, every family in the city nearly being represented, and the floral tributes were profuse and beautiful.

Whenever Radical conduct is so outrageous that Republicans cannot stand it and declare their intention to vote the Democratic ticket, what shall be said of that Democrat who intends to vote the ticket which Republicans themselves repudiated? There is something "radically" wrong with such a man, and the sooner he retraces his steps the better for him, and the better for the country.

ONE of the most enjoyable social events the young people of our city have ever had is the pleasure of participating in the Pick Tea given by Miss Margaret Smith, assisted by Miss Mattie Lee, at her home on William street, complimentary to her visitor Miss Van Armatad Burwell, of Charlotte, Wednesday evening. After tea the party adjourned to Armory Hall where, to the inspiring strains of the Italian band, the airy, fairy figures of the entrancing German were elongated into the wee small hours.

At Dudley, J. Frank Dobson announced himself a candidate for Sheriff. Frank is about the only man on the ticket who is not ashamed of being there; Grady, Broadhurst and Parks, wiggling under the burden of their associates, pretend that they are not Radical candidates. But Frank don't feel that way. A man who could vote for the nomination of the negro Scourlock for Congress and the negro Baker for Register of Deeds, and who could engineer such a performance as the late Radical convention, is superior to the feelings which actuate most people. A fine trio is Scourlock, Baker and Dobson.

THE Globe Sewing Company, that has had the boards of the Messenger Opera House in this city since Wednesday night, and that will appear to night in concluding its engagement, has given more satisfaction to its audience than any company that has ever played in Goldsboro during Fair week. Miss Seward has an splendid support, and is herself an actress of talent, culture and refinement. She specially desires to see a fine turnout of ladies in her audience to-night—and she most emphatically deserves their presence and patronage. The society events of the Fair week have thus far prevented the ladies from attending, but she hopes their engagements will be relaxed for her entertainment this evening. Special tickets, admitting lady and gentleman or two ladies, reserved seats, will be on sale at Robinson Bros. drug store during the day.

GOLDSBORO'S FAIR.

The Closing Day—The Attendance Good and the Day Enjoyable. Notwithstanding the Weather—The Fair a Success, Even in the Face of Its Wonted Adversity—Awarding of Prémiums.

NEXT YEAR'S EXPOSITION!

Yesterday was the third and last day of the Seventh Annual exposition of the Eastern Carolina Fair and Stock Association, and, as usual, the weather was more or less rainy and generally disagreeable. Notwithstanding this, however, the sale of tickets was good and the attendance quite large.

It was a busy day on the grounds everywhere, as the various committees—and they were legion—were going the rounds awarding premiums; and what a task they had before them!—for the Fair this year is not only remarkable for the great number and variety of its displays, but also for the unusual excellence and merit of the entries in all the departments.

Ladies' Work—In this department of Floral Hall the display is perhaps larger and is certainly of better quality than ever before. The artistic part of the work is exceedingly handsome and meritorious. The collections of paintings on china, silk, velvet, satin, plush, fired china, tin and terra cotta, are worthy to rank beside the work of experienced professional artists, while the oil paintings of landscapes and portraits, the representation of fruits, fluids, flowers and birds, the crayon pictures of people, faces, busts and animals, charm the eye and please the fancy as only the work of perfection can do.

The fancy work display is fully up to the best ever seen in Floral Hall. That is the judgment of all the ladies who inspected it yesterday. There is no end of crazy quilts, common quilts, silk quilts and other kinds of quilts—quilts enough to cover a small army of sleepers. Of arasene work there is a bewildering variety, and nearly all of it is exquisitely beautiful. Never before at our Fairs has there been such a superb collection of lace work of all kinds. In honiton and point lace especially there are some conspicuous specimens of exceeding merit, but as the premium report is to follow, we shall not particularize here. Equally extensive and varied is the knitting, darned and drawn work, ancient and modern, both as to style and specimens. In all kinds of useful needlework the exhibit is fully up to those of former years.

In the culinary department the "pastry supplies" are innumerable, both in variety and number; the biscuit, bread, butter, cakes, pies, jellies, preserves, pickles, canned fruits, vegetables and green corn, dried fruits of every variety and—well, we do not wonder at the traditional epicurean indulgences that enervated the Romans if their tables were supplied with anything like the good things displayed on the heavily loaded shelves in this department.

"Goldsboro Fair weather," which the management had hoped to escape this year but which swooped down on them with relentless persistency, the Fair has resulted in a financial success, and already the most cheering talk and a determination to go it on a yet more extensive scale next year is being indulged in by the Association, whose appreciation of the generous and cheerful patronage extended to them by the public everywhere, is beyond the possibility of expression.

The Ballot. The distinguishing difference between the Democracy and other forms of government is that in the Democracy, the people are, or are supposed to be, the sovereign source of power, and through delegated representatives provided for in the scheme of government, govern themselves. With the ballot they choose the representatives and the officers who are to make and administer the laws.

When the ballot is wielded with judgment, intelligence and conscience then, as a rule, competent, good men will be chosen, and the government will be honestly and justly conducted. It is only when this is not so, or when the people are deceived, that it can be otherwise. There may be difference of policies to be adopted and bad policies which are mistaken for good may prevail for a time and prove disastrous, but the people will not when they are convinced that a certain policy is disastrous, continue to support it. There may be those who will, but they are those who are especially benefitted by that policy and who reap profit from it at the expense of the rest, or the politicians who are kept in place and power through its instrumentality.

We have an illustration of this in the change of sentiment which has been taking place in this country on the protective tariff for some years back, notably in the past few years, during which some sections where the protection sentiment was once almost universal, have been nearly revolutionized. At the present rate of progress, within a very few years the revolution will be complete. When the people see the right, as a rule, they follow it, and it is only when blinded by prejudice, or when led astray by the false representations of leaders in whom they put their trust that they err much, and they are not apt to persist, long in the error when they discover it.

But there can be no good government in State or country where the citizen does not take interest enough in public affairs to exert his power and influence for good government, where they stand listlessly by and let a few self constituted leaders shape the politics and make the laws which govern them. There never is a bad government for which the citizen is not directly or indirectly responsible, and no one is more responsible than he who having the right to the ballot, fails to exercise that right to secure good government for himself and for his fellow citizens. In his indifference he not only fails to exercise a right which every citizen should exercise, but fails in the performance of a duty which is imperative on every citizen, whatever his station in life may be, however humble or however exalted. There is no law in this country to compel a citizen to vote, but every citizen should have that within him, that proud spirit of citizenship which would make it unnecessary for any one to invite or urge him to cast his ballot. In the line of duty there should be no inhibition, no urging, no appeal and no inducement of recognition or reward, but every citizen of his own volition, fully realizing and appreciating, his own individual sovereignty among thousands of other sovereigns, should, like a high spirited, manly man, cast his ballot for what he believes to be right and against what he believes to be wrong, for the men whom he believes to be good, honest, capable, against the men whom he believes to be bad, dishonest or incapable. If this were the rule, if every well-meaning, honest citizen did his duty and deposited his ballot according to his judgment and his conscience as he should do, there would be less cause for complaint in the administration of public affairs, and fewer incompetent men, fewer bad men, and fewer frauds would slip into responsible positions where they are powerful for mischief, and from which it is hard to get them out when once in, because in these days of machine politics the man who is in is much more powerful than the man who is out.

Good government should be the aim and object of every patriotic, honest citizen with intelligence enough to know what good government means. The ballot is the instrument provided by which the citizen records his decision as to who shall administer it and what his government shall be, and he who fails to speak through the ballot abdicates for the time being his citizenship and defaults in his solemn duty which he owes to himself, to his family, to his fellow-citizens, to his State, his country and to posterity.

The ballot is no toy, no plaything to be exercised at caprice or pleasure; it is a mighty weapon for good or evil, the exercise of which is a solemn responsibility and an imperative duty which no right-thinking citizen does and no citizen should evade.—Wit Star.
