

THE DAILY ARGUS.

GOLDSBORO, N. C., DEC. 24, 1900

N. C. Journalism.

It is a very sad reflection to me that not a few of the bright young men who have gone into journalism in my short day have been compelled to abandon it because it is unremunerative.

"It would afford me pleasure to continue at the Sentinel's helm, were it not for the fact that other fields offer greater inducements.

I know several young men in North Carolina of fine ability who are wearing away their lives in small towns publishing newspapers of real power who receive smaller compensation than men who measure calico in village towns.
