WILL LEAD IN CEMENT.

Great Gain Made by United States in its Production.

NO QUESTION OF ITS VALUE.

Becoming More Generally Used, and Builders Say It Will Replace Stone and Brick and Will Be Principal Construction Material—Figures Showing Growth of Industry.

Recent statistics in regard to the production of Portland cement indicate that the United States is destined to lead the world in that manufacture, as it is first among all of the nations in steel construction for building purposes, says the Chicago Post. Within the last 11 years the production of cement in the United States has increased 25 times and is used in nearly all construction in preference to that imported from Europe. Foreign manufacturers fear the progress of the American product, and less cement is being imported today than ever before in the history of its manufacture.

On the same ratio the use of cement for building purposes has increased during the same period until today it is used for every form of construction for which stone was formerly employed. An entire business building was recently constructed of cement in Washington, and it is successfully used for the construction of residences. The railroads have adopted it for bridge building. Viaducts, roadbeds, fireproof flooring and similar construction are among the more recent uses to which the material is being put by successful contractors and builders in the United States.

In view of these facts a few figures showing the growth of the industry in America are of interest. During the 11 year period referred to the product has increased from 835,000 barrels to 8,000,000 barrels. At the present time Portland cement is produced at more than 50 factories, with an average capital estimated at $20,000,000. The value of the domestic product annually is not less than $10,000,000.

In 1890 23 per cent of the cement used in the United States was of domestic manufacture; in 1900, with the total consumption four times greater, but 25 per cent was imported. A few years ago all of the product used in Chicago was manufactured abroad, while today builders and contractors say practically no imported cement is used in Chicago for any purpose. That of domestic manufacture is considered better and cheaper.

"There is no longer any question as to the value of cement in all construction in which brick and stone have been used in the past," said City Engineer Ericson, "its use is becoming more general with the knowledge required by experience and I do not doubt that ultimately cement will take the place of stone and brick altogether, for the reason that it is better and cheaper. In that event America is certain to take the lead in its production, as it presents the largest field for its use."

"It is only recently that the value of concrete as a building material has been generally understood. Today houses are being built out of concrete or cement stone, and the construction is entirely successful. In my opinion the most valuable use to which cement has been recently successfully employed has been in tunnel and conduit construction. It furnishes a better surface, is lighter, cheaper and far easier to handle in construction. It is used with great success in the building of sewers and drains. In fact, there is no construction today in which it does not have its place. All good foundations are of concrete, it is used extensively in bridge construction and is today second only to steel construction in the line of modern building materials.

"There is not the slightest question that cement can be manufactured as cheap if not cheaper in this country than abroad. The quality of domestic product is equal to that of imported material. Best evidence of this is found in the fact that here in Chicago, one of the leading cement markets in the country, nothing but imported cement was used up to a few years ago. Today I do not know of a barrel of foreign product which has gone into construction during the last two years."

Inquiry among the large contractors and cement dealers confirmed the confidence expressed in the future of the cement industry in America. "This country is bound to become the greatest producer of cement if for no other reason than because it furnishes the greatest field for its consumption," said Fred P. Updike, president of a company of contractors. "There is scarcely any building construction today in which it is not an important factor. Steel and cement construction are the best the world has ever known, and this country is able to produce both of unequalled quality."

Thomas Moulding, who is regarded as an authority upon the product, voices practically the same opinion as those expressed by the city engineer, calling special attention to the use of cement stone for residence building and for the adoption of concrete by the railroads for bridge building. "Domestic cement," said he, "is of a very fine quality, as good as any ever imported, and the increase to its manufacture is sufficient assurance that America will lead the world in its production."
