MR. LEROYLE IN

"Other People's Money" Will be Presented in the Messenger Opera House To-morrow Night.

You can do as much and sometimes more with other people's money than you can with your own, especially if your means are limited. In this case by using other people's, you would have a much larger capital with which to do business, this is exactly the principal upon which that very capable actor and comedian, HENNESSY LEROYLE.

HENNESSY LEROYLE. For in selecting his material with which to do business he has chosen as his capital "Other People's Money," and to demonstrate how well he has succeeded in the application of the same to his art as an amuser, it will only be necessary to announce the fact that he will be seen in this city to-morrow night, at the Messenger Opera House. Then those who have not been called heretofore to pass judgment upon the excellence of his work can rest assured that they have in store an evening full to repletion of good solid substantial enjoyment, that is, presuming that the would-be amusement seeker enjoys a laugh with his fellow men. For it is with this sole object in view that Mr. Leroyale and his merry company are brought to us with the play in question. Do not go to the theatre expecting songs, dances and knockabout features to be served you as comedy or you will meet with a sad disappointment, for none of these are component parts of the pronounced success of this play. It is a comedy, pure and simple.

Tickets now on sale at Hill's drug store. Doors open at 7:30.
