REFORM IN LEGAL PROCEDURE.

The agitation in favor of a correction of the abuses which exist in legal procedure, both in civil and criminal cases, has been going on for a long time, and has had the support of the various bar associations and other representative bodies throughout the country.

But it has remained for President Taft to make one of the most vigorous and convincing arguments in favor of this reform which has yet been put forward.

In his speech at Milwaukee he entered into the subject very thoroughly and expressed himself very emphatically.

The crux of the matter is "the law's delay," and the supreme need is to simplify procedure and eliminate the dilatory methods which make the administration of justice "a disgrace to our civilization," to use the President's language.

One of the most telling points he made in the course of his argument was that while formerly it was thought that a system which permitted appeals to the Supreme Court on even the smallest amounts was a perfect system because it enabled the poor man to go to that court as well as the rich man, it is now realized in the light of actual experience, that it works to the gross disadvantage of the poor man.

What the poor man needs, as a prompt decision of his case, and by limiting the appeals in cases involving small amounts so that there may be a final decision in the lower court, the poor litigant is given an opportunity to secure a judgment in time to enjoy it, and not after he has exhausted all his resources in litigating to the Supreme Court.

Although a lawyer, and proud of his profession, he laid special stress on the excessive cost of litigation, and this opens up a field of reform on which President Taft did not touch specifically but which has been becoming more and more onerous year by year until it is now an intolerable burden.

And that is the exorbitant fees which the courts have been allowing in receiverships and similar cases. These fees have continued to grow, under the nurturing influence of the courts, until they are out of all proportion to the service rendered. The lawyers, the masters, the receivers are all rewarded, not in proportion to the service rendered, but with a general relation to the amount of the estate involved. A lawyer who would consider himself amply rewarded for his services by a fee of a thousand dollars is awarded ten, perhaps fifty, times as much, while fees of hundreds of thousands of dollars are by no means unknown or uncommon.

The whole theory of these exorbitant fees is wrong, and a new standard should be set, by which lawyers and others engaged in receivership and other cases should be paid according to the actual work they do.

So a swifter and cheaper administration of the law is the great reform demanded at this time, and it is hoped that the efforts put forward by the President, who speaks with authority and from an intimate familiarity with the subject, will bear fruit.

He frankly confesses that the Federal courts have not set a very salutary example to the state courts in the matter of cheapness or expedition.

He therefore suggests the appointment of a congressional commission to take up the entire question, and to report a system which will not only afford quick and cheap justice in the Federal courts, but will offer a model to the legislatures and courts of the various states.

Public sentiment has been crystallizing very rapidly along this line, and the advocacy of the reform in such a high quarter will do much to strengthen it. The appointment of a congressional committee is perhaps the best means of getting at the root of the evil, but at all events the reform should come soon and it should be far-reaching.

Crows are flushing to sea Taft, say the dispatches. Oughtn't to have any trouble, unless blind.

If Mr. Roosevelt were still President, this north pole dispute would have been settled long ago.

Roosevelt killed an elephant. Considering the fights with the G. O. P. species, this is not so wonderful.

New Orleans has decided to bar a Taft poet. Can't see where the Taft poet, per se, is any worse than a magazine poet.

The first month having an "r" ushers in the oyster, and speeds the parting watermelon; for these are the melon colic days.

Dr. Cook's—or Peary's—right as first discoverer of the pole could not have been disputed if he had thought to place a seal on it.

Now that the polar regions are becoming so familiar the walrus and the carpenter may yet get together "to talk of many things."

The temptation to lay in a supply in Milwaukee against a long tour into dry territory was one that stronger men than President Taft could not have withstood.

That which was once accounted an especial virtue, namely, the eating of corn bread, is now accounted a vice. Thus the art of our necessities makes precious things vile.

"Swift flies the ship, with death's hand on the helm, but in the end the port it makes is peace"; yet a whole eternity of peace would hardly constitute a great financier's idea of happiness.

It is a fortunate thing that pellagra has been discovered in the West, for now the Northern press cannot attribute its prevalence in the South to our general ignorant and benighted condition.
