The excuse most of us have for our vices is the weakness of somebody else.

The cry goes up that many homes need more babies and less bridge whist.

Hoke Smith is said to be harboring a desire to supplant Lon. Livingston in Congress.

Bar Harbor bars out automobiles, but it will find the airship problem more difficult.

Senator LaFollette evidently believes in industrious insurgency. He insurges daily.

Cotton cannot go up if farmers persist in selling their bales as fast as they are ginned.

The Alaskans want a legislature. They apparently do not know when they are well off.

The age of Ann is not in it with the latest question, "How many pennies make a bushel?"

Albert Pulitzer committed suicide in Vienna, but he left, nevertheless, $6,000,000 in New York.

Pennsylvania's pure food men are camping on the trail of sausages stuffed with potatoes.

The Wrights never stop over, but when a stunt is laid before them they always have the goods.

Mayor McClellan had no desire to undergo another recount. The one he experienced cost over $50,000.

The cotton mills should begin to conform to thirteen-cent cotton, for it has come to stay a full year.

Those big trees in California did not so much feel their size when President Taft stood among them.

These autumnal days would be perfect if a good rain and a light frost would come along to perfect them.

The pageant habit has gone West—to St. Louis, where it can display itself in a city a hundred years old.

If Mr. Taft's stomach is rebellious he should not encourage 'possum dinners while he is in the 'possum belt.

South America is actually importing bathtubs, and when a continent begins to clean up it is surely looking up.

Editor Stead, of London, says he has been talking with the dead, but he does not show that he told them anything of value.

The Half Moon had only sixty tons displacement, and yet a replica of it electrified a great country. It was but a cockleshell.

All the trusts and capitalists should remember that fat pay envelopes make a merry Christmas and it is not early to send them out.

The English suffragette tries to be a ruffian and a lady at one and the same time. She cannot be both except perhaps by turns.

The deep waterway boomers will endeavor to convert the President to their views as they sail together down the broad but shallow Mississippi.

The warships are returning home to dry dock. They do not want to carry for keeps any sewerage gathered in the river that washes the big city.

Oregon and Illinois, as well as New York, are trying to collect inheritance taxes from the Harriman estate. If all succeed the widow may get but a mite after all.

Joe Cannon and Tammany do indeed constitute a team in politics that has rarely been outdone and Herbert Parsons, chairman of the New York Republican county committee is doing the enemy's scouting.

PARTY POLICIES AND PRESIDENTIAL VIEWS.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Evening Post has compiled a list of the policies that President Taft has advocated in his trip across the continent, and even a casual reading of it shows that he has cut out more work than his predecessor did, more even than President Johnson did, although the latter's policies became famous as "my policies."

Few of his policies became law and Mr. Roosevelt did not succeed in clubbing through Congress many of his pet measures. Mr. Taft wants a central bank of issue; a postal savings bank system; an income tax amendment, to be used in national emergencies only; no further changes in the tariff before March 4, 1913; the correction of the evil of swollen fortunes by the states instead of the general government; more amendments of the antitrust law; amendments of the Hepburn interstate commerce act that will cut out the railroads which should be regulated by new laws; new laws against the boycott and the issuance of injunctions; speedier action in the Federal courts; the conservation of national resources; the reclamation of arid lands; the preservation of forests; the deepening of waterways; the reorganization of the public land system; the regulation of the transfer of water power sites; separation of the surface of the land from the mineral contents thereof; the reorganization of the governmental departments in Washington; the enforcement of the pure food law; a clearer definition of the statutes relating to business; the prosecution and punishment of all violators of the law; international peace and friendship; ship subsidies for the development of a merchant marine; and then the President asks for these great changes relative to railroads:

The creation of a court to pass upon appeals from decisions fixing rates made by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Authority for the commission to determine the proper classification of merchandise for transportation. Authority for the commission to initiate complaints of discrimination in rates. Granting the commission power to compel connecting carriers to unite in forming through routes, and to fix a rate and apportionment thereof among the carriers. Prohibition of railroads from holding stock in competing railroads. Federal regulation through the Interstate Commerce Commission of the issue of railroad securities, which issues must be for legitimate purposes and on a substantial basis. Authority for railroads to make agreements on rates approved by the commission. Advocacy of a compulsory law requiring interstate railroads to adopt additional safety devices.

It is plain that not one in ten of the measures he advocates can be passed in a single Congress. He has cut out enough work to engage several Congresses, and he will probably see that comparatively little of what he wants will be granted. Some of his propositions will encounter strong opposition, notably those relating to ship subsidies, a central bank and a postal savings bank system. These three call for three battles extending over a session of Congress. Nor will the President be able to keep down all tariff agitation during his term of office. He has cut up considerably more than Congress will chew, and the chances are that the next session will come and go, leaving the statutes of the country essentially unchanged.

If Alaska gets a territorial government the esteemed Eskimos will become American voters, and we should be careful not to slander them in the course of the Cook-Peary controversy.

A colossal statue in white marble emblematic of purity is being erected just at the head of the Tenderloin in New York, but one statue will not clear the reputation of that locality.

Attorney General Williams of Oregon and of the Grant administrations is alive and is still holding office. He has the office-holding habit in its most chronic form.

On a lonely night Alex. Benton of Fort Edward, N. Y., climbed Bald Mountain to the home of a neighbor, tortured by Asthma, bent on curing him with Dr. King's New Discovery, that had cured himself of asthma.
