

Quick Action

On your part, will give you an opportunity to take advantage of attending the grandest landslide in shoe prices ever attempted in Goldsboro. Saturday morning at 9 a. m. the Goldsboro Shoe Company is going to give a demonstration of a Different Sale. This old reliable firm managed by business men who wish you to have one hundred cents worth of leather for every dollar spent in their store, does not need any introduction to the public. They like the shoes, they sell at solid bed rock. Attractive values combined with the high standard quality of our shoes will make this out-of-the-ordinary event an entirely Different Sale.

We realize the fact that the word Sale does not imply very much in this town as sale signs are to be seen on some of the store fronts month in and month out—and for this reason alone—and from the fact that this store never held a Sale, we are going to strain every nerve to make this an entirely Different Sale—a regular hand picked sale of hand picked shoes to back it up. Every pair in the store will carry a sale price ticket. You can look for yourself. We are going to put it across. As an added feature on opening day, Saturday morning at 9 a. m., to the first 25 women to enter our store we are going to give you a chance to buy a pair of shoes or low cuts for 50c. To the first 10 men, a chance to buy a pair of yellow tan Oxfords for 95c.

Come early. Tell your friends. It's to be a Different Sale.

Respectfully,

Goldsboro Shoe Co.

Their silent grief spread;
And glory gulf with solemn sound
The, throug the dead."

How bravely fought, how nobly they conducted themselves, how tenaciously they endured, has furnished a theme for my writer of renown, and the fact are now matters of common history entrancing and inspiring to the boys and girls of today, as they read others, no less brave than they, were permitted by a kind providence to escape death on the battlefields, on the shoulders of those who saved there was yet to be placed a fiercer and more humiliating burden in a battle of physical force. They returned to their homes, many of them suffering from wounds and with the health weakened by constant exposure to find their fields laid waste, their horses and their cattle stolen, their homes destroyed by the enemy, their personal efforts gone, and their wives and children suffering from lack of food, and their nerves almost at the breaking point from the horrible ordeals through which they had passed.

And added to this a victorious and ill advised enemy sought for a time to deprive the returned heroes of any voice in the political affairs of their own state and county, and sought to turn the Government of this fair land over to those who had been their former foes, led and directed mainly by a few plunder seeking carpet-baggers who had acquired a residence here from the enemy country merely for political purposes, and an occasional naive traitor, who was willing to sell his birth-right for a meas of misanthropic postage.

Oh, the days which followed were terrible days. Surely their story makes the blackest page in all American history. The days of reconstruction were worse than the days of the war. Words that they might be forgotten. I refer to them only as the necessary background against which the character of the returned Confederate soldier must be traced.

How did he react to these conditions? Without money and without food, in many instances without sufficient seed for planting, he quietly stepped from the trenches into the furrow or the back-shop, and with one eye singled out his home and loved ones, and then upon his commonwealth, with the same devotion to duty and the same sense of duty that had carried him through the years of armed conflict, grimly set about the work of building here out of the ashes of the old South a new South of greater and grander proportions.

Let the strength of the civilization which is ours today bear evidence of the thoroughness with which he has done his work. But his career is about at an end. That "faint shining grey line" so eloquently described by our Chief Justice a few years ago, has almost completely passed into the beyond. At the suggestion a question involuntarily arises—what of us who are left behind? Are we of this generation proving ourselves worthy descendants of this sturdy and noble ancestry? I pass it on trusting that the thought may inspire us to higher ideals and greater and nobler achievements.

Since we last assembled here there has gone to his eternal reward, after a long useful life, one of the greatest of these old Confederate warriors, a leader in the battles, a Captain of the Veterans in peace, and one whose life in peace as in war was a splendid example, not only to his comrades, but to all who were brought within the radius of his influence—Captain Thomas Wright Stocumb. No one was more interested in these annual exercises than he; no one more eager and alert to keep history straight; no one more anxious that our children should be taught the truth about that terrible conflict and that, knowing the truth, they should be proud of their heroes, proud of their ancestry and unashamed to speak the truth whenever they might chance to be asked it proper and fitting, therefore that on this occasion that I feel as well, I should speak somewhat of him about this good man.

Thomas Stocumb came of noble lineage. In the early days of our National history we find the name listed among the names of our distinguished patriots. His great-grandfather, Patrick Stocumb, held the rank of Major in the Revolutionary army.

His name and distinction for his bravery and ready wit in action at the famous battle of Moore's Creek Bridge. His great-grand-mother, Mary Stocumb, is perhaps better known to fame than her husband for her bravery that long and hazardous journey alone and at night, from her home near Dudley, in this county, to Moore's Creek Bridge, in what is now Pender County, on October 3, 1781, at great battle, because of which her husband was wounded.

There were born seven children, all of whom are now living. Any sketch of Capt. Stocumb's life is incomplete.

Of Interest To Mr. Vanstory's Friends

(Spartanburg, S. C., News)

Social affairs continuing throughout the week for a trio of brides, who are receiving much attention. Following the gatties of the past week which was crowded with functions for many festive guests, the parties for the bride-elects will continue.

Miss Annie Laurie Peterson will be honor guest at a party arranged by Mrs. Robert Little, of Saluda, Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. F. Brown, guests to include a group of mutual friends.

Tuesday Mrs. R. E. Peterson will give a luncheon for members of the immediate bridal party.

Mr. and Mrs. V. M. Montgomery will entertain the bridal party Tuesday evening following a rehearsal at the Church of the Advent.

Wednesday Mrs. L. K. Jennings will give a morning bridge party in compliment to Miss Peterson and Mrs. V. M. Montgomery.

GUESTS FOR PETERSON-VANSTORY WEDDING.

A number of guests from out of the city will arrive early this week for the Peterson-Vanstory wedding which will take place Wednesday evening May 10 in the Church of the Advent.

Mrs. J. W. Cunningham of Spartanburg, N. C., and Miss Ellie Mae Foushee of Greensboro, N. C., will be the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Peterson.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowry Stafford and Miss J. Vanstory of Greensboro, Mr. James C. Vanstory, Mr. Clalborne Royal of Goldsboro, and Mr. Fred Cunningham of Fayetteville will be the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. V. M. Montgomery.

MRS. COBB ENTERTAINS

Another beautiful affair was added to the round of bright parties which Miss Helen Sims has been receiving prior to her wedding May 17, when Mrs. James Cobb was hostess at cards yesterday at the Country Club. The honoree was given a mahogany tray, and Miss Annie Laurie Peterson, who was a guest of the occasion, received a vase, while the prize for top score was a string of novelty beads.

A salad course was served after cards.

Of Interest To Our Lady Readers

Editor Argus:—No doubt the lovers of style will like to read about what's going on in Fifth Avenue district of the world's greatest metropolis.

No season of the year arrives more attractively attired than summer, and the show rooms where the collections of ready-to-wear are now being shown have taken the appearance of brilliantly colored flower gardens, the snow figures being gaily clothed in flimsy fabrics of brilliant hue.

Cotton frocks are taking on a more and more summery appearance as the season advances.

Novelty silks, pongee and printed georgettes are used for day time frocks.

The semi-formal frocks appear in organdie, pastel, colored voiles, batiste or colored cream net. Also I find figured voiles, linen, ratine, checked ginghams, dark colored dotted swiss, and novelty figured materials. These frocks are models of distinction.

More vivid shades than are usually worn in summer mark the coming season with an individual cachet. Pastel shades, however, loveliest when the sun shines brightest, have lost none of their popularity and we see pale French blue, pink, lavender, dandelion yellow and Nile green and jade. All white is considered particularly chic and the white costume, with just a suggestion of color, is among the season's most interesting novelties.

There are just lots of other things to write about but I feel I may be taking too much of your valuable space.

Thanking you heartily for all your kindnesses and with my highest esteem.

Very sincerely yours,
NEIL JOSEPH,

NEW FORD STOLEN

From Mr. W. A. Martin
Shortly after he had purchased it Mr. W. A. Martin of Eureka, had his brand new Ford automobile stolen here yesterday. It had not been located late last night.

Mr. Martin, who is the father of Mr. Claude H. Martin, of the city of Mr. Joe A. Parker, came to Goldsboro yesterday to do some shopping, including the purchase of the car.

Soon after, while attending to business, Mr. Martin's car was left on Centre Street between Walnut and Chestnut, and almost immediately disappeared.

There is evidently a specialist thief on the lookout for Fords.

The Argus hopes Mr. Martin's car will be reclaimed and the thief apprehended.

Famous Beauty Regains Health and Strength through Ironized Yeast

"A Wonderful Help in Keeping My Figure Perfect" Says Beautiful Elsie La Bergere

It was by purest coincidence that I picked up a package of Ironized Yeast just as I was about to give up the struggle for a long needed rest. The results that it brought in me proved that it was just what I needed. For today I actually feel like a new, young woman!"

Such is the amazing statement of Elsie La Bergere, known to vaudeville lovers all over the continent for the beauty of her figure. "My stage work," continues Miss La Bergere, "put such a severe strain on my nervous system that every performance became a hardship. I lost my appetite, and always felt tired and worn out. Then I discovered Ironized Yeast, and I really cannot give enough praise for it. It not only keeps me absolutely fit in every way, and that it is a great help in keeping the shape of my body in wonderful condition. Ironized Yeast has a permanent place of honor in my traveling bag."

How New Process Makes Yeast Doubly Effective

The new process of IRONIZED YEAST brings such remarkable results in its great benefits often in just half the usual time. It is so great, but feels show that it needs some other agent to quickly convert its wonderful health-building power into firm tissue, rosy cheeks and sparkling eyes.

Everyone who has a grain of great value in converting our food into energy and tissue. So working on this principle, our scientists discovered the wonderful power of ironization—the process through which the combination of yeast and iron becomes the most effective of all iron will do. Yeast being the best and quickest result out of when it is treated through the scientific process.

Do not think, however, that any combination of yeast and iron will do. Yeast being the best and quickest result out of when it is treated through the scientific process.

It is treated through the scientific process embodied only in IRONIZED YEAST, the one scientifically correct yeast treatment.
