Face to Face With God

As has often been said, Raphael's painting of the transfiguration carries an historical inaccuracy. In the account in the gospels the valley incident of the demonic boy follows the transfiguration, St. Luke even putting it the next day. Raphael, however, has both on his canvas as if occurring at the same time. On the mount and in the foreground with Jesus in their midst, His garments glistening and His face shining. In the valley and at the back is the demonic boy struggling to be free.

Of course, the paroxysms of the boy may actually have been in progress while Jesus was on the mount, with SS. Peter, James and John, and the culmination and healing may have come later, when they descended. But there would be no particular point in stressing either this long continued attack of the boy's malady nor the fact that the attack and the transfiguration were simultaneous.

It seems more probable, as has been suggested, that the artist was attempting to convey, not a temporal but a logical connection between the two happenings. He was saying not that the two occurred together, but that the two were inseparable in thought. A picture of the transfiguration would have been incomplete without its counterpart of untransfigured life.

Our moments of transfiguration are so brief, but they are expected to hold and shed their glory upon all the common round of life.

The mountains must minister to the plains, the hills must send their dew and rains upon the valleys. Relaxation, pleasure, is in order to nobler work. Seashore and mountain and lakeside must transform labor, discover the golden heart of drudgery and make monotony only the mask that romance wears.

Every thrill is to generate electric power for days and days of deeds. Strange and lovely combinations of color must live in the soul to overspread whole areas of drab commonplace. God's canvasses, hung alike in the east and west, His melodies interpreted by birds and men, the agrances that float at night on zephyr wings are not to be enjoyed and forgotten, but to be enjoyed and lived. So with our time of spiritual exaltation, when we seem to stand face to face with God, "whereby we cry Abba—Father."

Go to church tomorrow—and seek there link up your thoughts with things spiritual and open the windows of your soul to visions eternal.

AN EDITOR FOR CONGRESS

(Wilmington Star, May 20)
Interest in Wilmington was quickened in the third district primary when there appeared in The Star on Thursday a four column card signed by nearly 300 Wayne county Democrats commending Editor Joseph E. Robinson, of the Goldsboro Argus, for the Democratic nomination for congress from the third district. At the head of that formidable announcement appeared a picture of the editor-candidate, and the heartiness with which his veritable host of friends endorsed him for the nomination attested the great popularity of Colonel Robinson in his home city.

Personally, we looked upon a familiar face when we caught a glimpse of the likeness of a friend of these many years ago. Probably there is no more popular man in the third congressional district and we know there is no more staunch and deserving Democrat in the state. Colonel Robinson was an active, enthusiastic Democrat when we first met him more than 20 years ago, and no editor in the state ever rendered a greater service to the party through his influential paper than he. Individually he has done yeoman service for the political interests of the state, and is doing so with the loyalty of a true citizen.

Now that he is making a campaign for the Democratic nomination for congress, there is no wonder that his friends are standing by him with an endorsement that is extremely flattering. He deserves all the commendation they give him, for we know that as an editor and as a citizen he has given his time and ability to civic and public causes of every description. North Carolina has no truer son and neither Goldsboro nor Wayne county ever had a citizen who sacrificed more of his time or who has been more devoted to their interest than the veteran editor of the Argus. The city of Goldsboro has reason to be proud of him and to be appreciative of him for the noteworthy service he rendered many years as chairman of the board of education of Wayne county. Always interested in public education, he has given the benefit of his time and energy to the education of the children of his city and county. He has given the benefit of his instruction and school public nature wisdom and energy. Goldsboro's schools have been recognized all over the state for their high standard of efficiency, and it was under his directing hand that one of the noblest acts of the State was established on the Goldsboro campus since been carried out. When Wayne county in the annual congressional district, has its representative committee, and for several years when courage, wisdom and head were needed in behalf of his party he was a trusted leader who was this day and night till triumph came for the party.

Probably the most noble service Colonel Robinson ever rendered was in behalf of the children and in the interest and welfare of the public to serve the third district, if generally. When hardly more than 21 years of age he found-

Local Fires

The fire department was called twice last night to put out a blaze in the same building—a vacant house back of the police station belonging to the Misses Bixzell. According to the first alarm, the firemen checked the blaze—a very small one and adjourned. Thirty minutes later, about 9.30, they were called again and the blaze was more threatening. It was checked.

Leslie Hinson, white, was badly injured by a truck headed for the fire. He was rushed to the Goldsboro hospital and a cut on the head and a bruised limb were treated and he was discharged.

The fire department answered a hasty call this morning at the Magill Brothers Garage to find a small fire in a Chevrolet car. The fire was soon extinguished, the car being damaged slightly.

SOUTHERN BAPTISTS AND TITHS

(By Associated Press.)
Jacksonville, May 20.—Three times as many Southern Baptist men today adopted the tenth of their incomes as the minimum of church contributions as last year. The laymen's missionary movement report states that the establishment of the Southwide Baptist University would be deferred for another year. Forty one hundred messengers are now enrolled. A resolution requesting Congressional action to modify the Chinese exclusion act and "stop persecution of the Chinese Christians in the United States by government officials" introduced by representative Upshaw, of Georgia.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 20.—The Southern Baptist Convention today declined to appoint a committee to join with one of the Northern Baptist Convention in drawing up a new statement of Baptist faith to name a committee to cooperate with the Northern Convention in various activities.

Proposals for such action was explained by Dr. E. Y. Mullins, president of the Convention. The Southern Convention report declared that the relation between the two bodies is "wholly sympathetic and fraternal" and there is no need for Southern Baptists to take the lead in writing a new confession of faith. The laymen's missionary movement was the general topic of the morning session and its report showed that 248,418 Southern Baptist Laymen now give one-tenth of their income to religious work. Preachers must practice tithing to be successful in their work, he said.

Auto Is Friend Of Church Says Pastor

Kearney, Neb., May 20.—Publicity changed the automobile from an enemy to a friend of the church, according to Rev. Oliver Kene, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church here. "When the people of the whole community know of a church and the kind of sermons preached the car will carry them to it instead of away from it," he said. "By advertising in local papers I have quadrupled the membership of my church in four years. Christ said, 'Go out and compel them to come in.' What is more compelling than advertising in the modern way?" "I often inserted a quarter page or half page ad in the home papers. The expense of advertising is met by the advertising draws to church, the collection box, and the more people of course the larger the collection. So the ads pay for themselves in actual money. The good that is accomplished cannot be measured in dollars and cents.

"Advertising must be backed by a sound, honest, gospel message from the pulpit. Nothing can take the place of the gospel; not movies, nor music, nor half-baked addresses on current topics. And the man who goes once is pretty apt to return and bring someone with him."
