LOCAL RIPPLES.

—“Skipped by the Light of the Moon” will be seen here next Thursday evening.

—The State Sanitary Convention is in session at Raleigh. Charlotte is not represented.

—It is time that work was being commenced on the buildings for the Exposition of the Carolinas.

—The boys are looking forward to a season of skating. If the weather holds cold for a day or two there will be plenty of ice on the ponds.

—Attention is called to the advertisement of the Mutual Building and Loan Association. Parties wishing to invest will find this a good association.

—The Wilmington Messenger says that an earthquake shock was felt in that city, last Tuesday afternoon, at the same hour a shock was reported in Charleston.

—Mrs. Chas. W. Tillet won McCausland's first rebus prize, and secured a coal vase. Mrs. C. L. Hunter won second prize, and was awarded a water set. Mr. Delagie Sidler took the third prize, a silver dollar.

—Mr. Frank Smith, who has been confined to his room at the Buford for sometime with rheumatism and fever, is able to sit up, and will leave this evening for Cleveland Springs. His many friends will be glad to hear of his improvement.

—All are expected to attend the Dime Reading to-night from 8 to 12 o'clock without further invitation. It is a pretty cold evening we know, yet to all who come will be extended a warm welcome, and much will be found in-doors to entertain. Refreshments of various kinds will be furnished at a reasonable price, so bring a friend and treat him to hot oysters, salad and coffee, &c. Don't forget the number, 507 South Tryon street.

Mecklenburg Mines.

The mining editor of the Salisbury Herald gives this account of the Mecklenburg mines: “They are meeting with good success at the Henderson mine. Manager Rollins and Capt. Warren are giving their attention to the business.

“Work has not yet been resumed at the Chapman mine. This is one of the best prospects for a good paying mine; several hundred tons of ore in sight that will run from $10 to $15 per ton.

“The Grant mine ore has been tested at Indian Trail works, and found to contain 16 pwts. gold, silver, a trace; sulphur, 41 per cent.”

A Valuable Art Collection.

A valuable collection of miniature portraits is on exhibition at the art gallery of Mr. J. H. Van Ness. The portraits were executed fifty years ago, and bear the stamp of “E. S. Dodge, artist, Florence, Alabama.” The artist is the father of Mr. E. R. Dodge, of Charlotte, and his work is pronounced by critics to be exceedingly fine. The portraits are painted on ivory, and while very small, cost $75 each. In the collection is a portrait of Madame L'Conte. The collection is a very valuable one, and has been attracting a great deal of attention by the art critics.

Destructive Fires in Cabarrus.

Two destructive fires occurred in Cabarrus county yesterday. The works and machinery at the Crowell mine, and the Miller grist mills, were burned. The mills were located on the river, about one mile from the Crowell mine. The loss is very heavy in each instance. The fires are supposed to have been incendiary.

The Charlotte Cotton Market.

The Charlotte cotton market was again firm today. The tone of the market was strong. The receipts by wagon were 39 bales. There was no change in the quotations, the prices paid being as follows:

Strict Good Middling . . . 9 1/2 @ 9 3/4
Good Middling 9 1/4
Strict Middling 9 1/4
Middling 9 1/4 @ 9 3/4
Tinges 9 1/4 @ 9 3/4

A NEW BAGGING TRUST.

The Hydra Headed Jute Combination Still Alive and Kicking.

The farmers of the South put in some heavy lies last season on the bagging trust, and they about used up the trust, but there will be a new combination for them to fight next season. The Boston Commercial Bulletin explains the case in this wise: On the twelfth of January we announced the termination by limitation of the bagging combination. The contracts with several of the mills, notably that of the Louisville Bagging Manufacturing Co., expired on January 1, and they attempted to dictate more favorable terms to the eight concerns which formed the nucleus of the combination. In consequence the combination quietly dissolved.

The eight firms in question have since been quietly purchasing the entire supply of jute butts here, afloat and in Calcutta. In this they have succeeded, and the entire world's supply of jute butts is now owned by them. The Ludlow Manufacturing Co., the only large mills that has never joined the combination is fully supplied with material, but the mills that broke the combination have now their choice between entering it again on the terms the eight choose to give them and ceasing to manufacture for lack of material. At the close of the year the combination had about 15,000,000 yards of bagging left on hand. Having now secured control of the total available supply of material, the illustrious eight are in a position to dictate terms almost if not quite as effective as the old combination.

The railroad facilities in India are so much improved that the entire jute crop gets to market before March, instead of slowly dragging along till summer. September is the earliest date of shipment of the crop from Calcutta. The first arrival of butts from the new crop of 1889 will not take place till January, 1890. Until next January, therefore, the smaller combination of 1889 is likely to be able to control the market for bagging quite as effectively as the larger combination of 1888. As the incoming Congress is not likely to destroy the jute butt manufacture of this country by threatening to hand over the covering of the cotton crop to the Indian Jute Manufacture Association, it is probable that cotton bagging will be sold this year at a lower figure, the manufacturers being no longer forced to get back their entire outlay in a single year. Last year the combination charged as high as thirteen cents a yard for two pound bagging. This price has already declined from two to three cents a yard. Bagging made from jute butts can be sold at from eight to nine cents a yard and show a fair profit to the manufacturer.

The Bulletin says that at the very lowest calculation it takes thirty-five thousand tons yearly of jute butts to cover the cotton crop of this country.

Capt. Jas. M. Odell.

The people of Concord will be interested in the following, which we copy from the Raleigh News and Observer of today: “A handsomely framed crayon portrait of this gentleman was hung in the State Library rooms yesterday. Capt. Odell has done as much as any one person in the state towards developing our manufacturing interests. Having been reared on the farm, at the age of twenty-one he started to carve out a name and fortune. How he succeeded is witnessed by the fact of the numerous positions of honor and trust now held by him, viz: President of the Concord National Bank, Odell Manufacturing Company, Durham Cotton Company, Cannon Manufacturing Company, Salisbury Cotton Mills and one or two others. In 1861 Capt. Odell entered the Confederate army and was elected captain of Company M, 2d Regiment Infantry. His success in life has been remarkable, his accumulations steady and large, and today he is a representative of the typical Southern Christian gentleman.”

Portrait of Battle Flags.

The Bradford family of Cabarrus yesterday presented to the new company of Cabarrus Black Boys the flags that were carried through the war by the first company of that name. There are two of these flags, one of silk, made and presented to the company on its organization by the ladies of Concord. This one has a history that will interest the hearer. Mr. Bradford, the color-bearer, was captured in battle, and remained a prisoner for many weary months. During this time he wore, concealed in the lining of his coat, this flag, so dear to his heart, and brought it safely home. The other flag, carried through many battles, tells in bullet holes and rents by shells of the brave devotion of those soldiers who yielded their lives under its weary folds. Looking on these sacred relics the lines of Father Ryan come instinctively to the mind:

Forl that banner! true, 'tis gay,
Yet 'tis wreathed around with glory,
And 'twill live in song and story.
Through its folds are in the dust,
Forl that banner! sadly, slowly,
Trust it gently, it is holy,
For it droops above the dead.

A Child Scalded.

Hattie Armstrong, a five year old daughter of Mrs. Armstrong, of Sugar Creek, was frightfully scalded a few days ago. They were killing hogs, and had the water on to scald them, when the child overturned the pot and was burned almost to death. She is kept alive by morphine. The neighbors say her screams were heartrending. She was alive at last accounts. She is a sister to the lady who was bitten by a cat a few days since.

Senator Vance Takes a Walk.

The News' Washington correspondent, writing under date of the 6th, says: “Senator Vance took a walk yesterday, for the first time since his eye was taken out. The walk did him good. He will soon be able to resume his place in the Senate.”

COL. CHAS. R. JONES.

Application Made for his Admittance to the Western North Carolina Insane Asylum.

An application for the admittance of Col. Chas. R. Jones, to the Western North Carolina Insane Asylum, at Morganton, will be forwarded to Dr. Murphy, the superintendent this afternoon. The application is made upon the affidavit of Dr. H. M. Wilder, Robert L. Jones and W. H. Harris.

Upon request, Dr. Wilder last Monday examined Col. Jones, and pronounced him insane. Out of consideration for the family, The News made no mention of the matter, preferring to wait until Dr. Murphy could be heard from, thinking that that would be ample time.

The old editor is undoubtedly daft. Indications of the overthrow of his reason had long been apparent, and the final collapse was not unexpected to those who had watched him. His mind had been giving way for months past, and quite recently both mind and health broke. Col. Jones is a mental and physical wreck, and the asylum is indeed the best home that could be secured for him in his present condition. Dr. Wilder, in his report of the medical examination, says that Col. Jones imagines himself to be the greatest man in the South, and that he keeps company with the crowned heads. Monday last he remarked to the doctor, “I slept last night with my feet against the ribs of Queen Elizabeth, and she had thirteen ribs on each side.” He is not violent. The feeble condition of his constitution makes violence on his part next to an impossibility, yet he makes it unpleasant for his family, and last night he delivered a heavy blow on the head of his son Robert with an iron ring. It is a pitiful case, and one that touches the hearts of the community. It is to be hoped that the application for his admittance to the asylum will be granted, and that under Dr. Murphy's treatment he will be restored to his former self.
