LOCAL RIPPLES.

—Col. Wm. Johnston and his son, Mr. Frank Johnston, left to-day for a trip to Mexico.

—Tail-end collisions come high, but it looks like the Richmond and Danville is bound to have 'em.

—There will be services at St. Martin's chapel, corner of D and Tenth streets, at 7:30 this evening.

—Mr. S. Wittkowsky leaves this evening for a trip to the Northern markets to lay in still another supply of new goods for his big wholesale house.

—There will be a business meeting of St. Martin's Guild immediately after the close of services at the chapel to-night. A full attendance is desired.

—It was snowing in Washington and New York to-day. In Charlotte we had the brightest of spring sunshine, with the fruit trees bursting out into big bouquets of bloom.

—Wm. Woodward, of New York, one of the millionaires of the Cotton Exchange and a prominent manipulator of the cotton market, died to-day. He was a Charlotte correspondent.

—Messrs. J. C. Leonard and J. L. M. Lyerly, of the Catawba College, at Newton, passed through the city yesterday on their way to Wilmington as delegates to the Y. M. C. A. Convention.

—The officers of the Second Presbyterian church held a conference with their pastor, Rev. J. Y. Fair, last night, and advanced reasons why he should stay here. Mr. Fair has the matter of his call to Richmond under consideration.

—The final preparations for the concert to be given to-morrow night at the Y. M. C. A. hall have been completed, and according to all probability there will be a treat in store for everybody who may attend. You had better go.

—Col. Frank Coxe arrived at the Central yesterday afternoon. He says that the Three C's Railroad is progressing in a very satisfactory manner, and the links in the great line between Charleston and Cincinnati are being rapidly joined.

—Mecklenburg Iron Works at Charlotte, N. C., (John Wilkes, manager,) has shipped milling machinery direct to South America. Theirs is all first-class work. Engines, stamp mills, pumps, &c. So says the Salisbury Herald. The Mecklenburg Iron Works has been doing this kind of business for years past. Its mining machinery is at work in the mines of all quarters of the globe.

Sawdust in her Windpipe.

A party of children were playing on Mint street day before yesterday, when a boy told a little girl to hide a piece of chalk about her person, when he would tell her where it was. She hid the chalk, and the boy then told her to open her mouth. As she did so, he threw a handful of sawdust into her mouth and some of the particles lodged in her windpipe. Four doctors attended the little sufferer. She is now better, but for a time it was feared that she could not survive. This is a warning to children.

Mecklenburg Gold.

Dr. R. M. Eames, mining editor of the Salisbury Herald, says in that paper this week: "Several so-called mines, or merely holes sunk on veins of sulphide ores, are now being examined and reported on by one of our leading experts. He reports, so far, the inspection has proved millions of tons of workable ore veins in a radius of ten miles from Charlotte. Fictitious and contact veins of sulphides of iron and copper, all carrying gold from 5 dwts. to 30 dwts. per ton of 2,000 pounds, large bodies of brown ores (oxide of iron) that only require stamping and passing over copper plates to arrest the gold, and concentration of the heavy sulphides convert these minerals to commercial value. The same class of ores exist in the adjoining counties of Cabarrus and Rowan, only awaiting an economical mode of treatment for saving all its products."

ESQUIRE NEWELL DONE UP.

All Six of the Rooms in His House Backed by Burglars--The Family Found Clothing Very Scarce.

Esquire John A. Newell, of Newell's station, six miles from Charlotte on the Richmond & Danville road, came into town today, dressed in an old suit of clothes and wearing a hat that had lost its symmetry and had through long wear resolved itself into a shape similar to that of a pineapple cheese. The Esquire had been visited by burglars the previous night, and that was the best thing he could do in the way of a rig up. He was in town in the hope that he could come up with the burglars, as he had tracked them in the direction of the city.

The burglars made themselves at home in Esquire Newell's house. They broke open a window in the ell, and thus gained admittance to the whole house. They went through six rooms, and in four of these rooms people were sleeping. Manlius Means, of Charlotte, who was completing a contract for painting Esq. Newell's house, and a young man named Smith were sleeping in one of the upstairs rooms. The burglars went to the head of the bed and stole all the wearing apparel of both men. They went into Mr. Newell's sleeping room and stole Mr. Newell's new hat, his new suit of clothes, his watch and chain, $45 in cash, and also took all of Mrs. Newell's clothes. The other rooms were sacked of clothes, dresses, shoes, bed-clothes, etc., and after securing a trunk and a valise in addition to all this booty, the thieves departed. As they were leaving, Mr. Newell's mother was aroused by a noise, and she raised an alarm. Mr. Newell got his gun and gave chase, but the burglars had the start of him. The young man Smith says that he distinctly saw one of the men fleeing down the stairs when Mrs. Newell gave the alarm. The trunk, rifled of its contents, was found in Mr. Newell's barn yard. Mr. Newell tracked the burglars in the direction of Charlotte, and had no difficulty in following their track for several miles along the railroad. The burglary occurred between 12 and 1 o'clock.

A Freight Wreck.

The south-bound passenger train on the Richmond and Danville road, due here at 2 o'clock this morning, did not arrive until 12 o'clock to-day. The delay was caused by a blockaded track between Jamestown and Greensboro. The first section of the north-bound freight train jumped the track last night, and the second section crashed into it, demolishing eight cars, and filling the cut, in which the accident occurred, with wreckage. The engineer and fireman of the second section leaped from the engine and escaped being mashed up in the wreck. None of the crew of either train was hurt. The engine of the second section was badly broken up and thrown across the track, making the work of clearing the wreck a very tedious one. Jay Gould's train was caught on this side of the wreck, and could not pass until 10 o'clock this morning. The north-bound passenger train which passed here at 5 o'clock this morning was also blocked.

A Glance at Gould.

Yesterday's issue of THE NEWS containing an announcement of the coming of Jay Gould, was circulated on the streets half an hour before the arrival of the train, and as a result, there was a big crowd at the depot when the train came in, to see the big money king. Mr. Gould appeared on the rear platform of his car, much to the satisfaction of the people. He looked pale and somewhat of an invalid. Mr. Gould was met by Col. Wm. Johnston and the two had quite a pleasant talk during the 20 minutes' stay of the train at Charlotte. Mr. Gould doubtless felt relieved when he did not notice any pistols, bowie knives or dynamite bombs in the crowd, and no person in the crowd who looked like he might be the kind of a character to carry such things.

IT BEAT A FOX HUNT.

Mt. Holly Turns Out and Captures a Negro who had Fired Two Stores.

They had a lively time of it at Mt. Holly yesterday, in a successful chase after a negro who had fired two stores in that town last Monday. The negro is named Thomas Jefferson, and suspicion had pointed very clearly to his door. When it became known yesterday that he was in the vicinity of Mt. Holly, the whole town turned out, and no fox hunt was ever more exciting. The negro led his pursuers, who were armed with guns and pistols, towards Dutchman's creek, a deep, sluggish stream that empties into the Catawba just above Mt. Holly. They ran him through swamps and briars for a mile or two, and when the negro came to the bank of the stream he plunged in, swam across and hid in a patch of thick vines and undergrowth on the opposite side. His hiding place was discovered and he was hauled out a captive. Several shots had been fired at him during the chase, but he was unhurt. The negro was escorted to jail at Dallas by over half the male population of Mt. Holly, and was to have been arraigned for trial before Judge Clarke to-day. He burned Mr. White's store at Mt. Holly because Mr. White refused to credit him. He also fired the store of C. L. Hutchison & Co., but this fire was extinguished.

Handling Burnt Cotton.

A News reporter got on the trail of a lot of burnt cotton on College street this morning, and following it up he found that it led to the big warehouse of Sanders & Orr. Following the trail up the first flight of stairway, the reporter found himself in a large water-closet, the floor of which was covered a foot deep with burnt cotton, at which a dozen pickers were at work picking out the burnt stuff and sorting the grades. This cotton all comes from the recent platform fire. It is sorted out into four grades, the highest being as good as the cotton before the fire, and the others going down to the kind that is good for ropes, etc. The second and third floor of the big warehouse are devoted to this sorting business, and two sets of hands are employed. On the third floor, bales that were only slightly damaged, are picked clear of black cotton, when two bales are dumped into one, covered with new bagging and pressed by hand power. Each grade is carefully assorted and placed to itself. The lowest grade is thoroughly dried and sent to a gin, where it is again baled and ready for the market. It is troublesome and expensive work and the cotton man who comes out square on a deal in burnt cotton, has cause to congratulate himself as an able financier and a sharp business man.

About Dr. Woods.

The Charleston News and Courier received yesterday has the following from its Columbia correspondent that will be of interest to Charlotte people, in view of recent publications made in THE NEWS: "It is already well known that several weeks ago the Rev. Neander M. Woods, of the First Presbyterian church, received a flattering call from the congregation of the Second Presbyterian church of Memphis, the pulpit of which had been vacated by the acceptance by the pastor, Dr. Boggs, of the chancellorship of the University of Georgia, and that Dr. Woods went on to Memphis to meet the congregation. Since his return to Columbia Dr. Woods has given most earnest consideration to the subject, and it was hoped that he would conclude to remain in Columbia. In response, however, to an inquiry made by the News and Courier correspondent, Dr. Woods to-night said that he had just reached a decision, and that much as he regretted the severance of relations which had made his stay in Columbia so pleasant, he thought it his duty to accept the call to Memphis. The field there was a very wide one, and the church to which he had been called was pronounced the most influential body of Christians in Memphis, its 420 members including many of the most prominent men of the city. While he had assurances of a perfectly unanimous call, he desired it understood that his change of pastorate was not yet certain, as the Presbytery of Memphis would first have to give its consent to the formal call of him to the church in that city, and the Charleston Presbytery must consent in its hearing to present charge."
