

A Vein of Kaolin Near Statesville.

Statesville, N. C., Oct. 16.—Recently J. T. Cashion discovered on his place, near town, what he thought to be a large vein of kaolin, and he is now sure that it is the genuine article. Experts and others who have examined samples of the clay pronounce it a high grade of kaolin, and of course this means much to Mr. Cashion, as there is a large amount of the clay on his place.

Kaolin is a name applied to all porcelain clays which endure the fire without discoloration. It is very valuable, and is used for making the finer grades of earthenware. There is considerable kaolin mined in North Carolina, but there is no manufacturing plant in the state using the product, all of it being shipped to points in the north.

Trouble on The Warpath.

Concord Times.
As a result of friction with the Jamestown Exposition management half a dozen or more of the attractions on the warpath were dark last week, the electric power having been cut off on orders of the management. It is alleged by the management that the concessionaires are behind in their payments to the Exposition. The 101 Wild West Show and Hell Gate two of the big attractions on the path are among those closed. The Wild West Show was scheduled to leave the Exposition Saturday, but it has been enjoined from doing so by the Exposition company. Many suits are threatened as a result of the complications.

For a New Hotel.

Catawba County News.
Hickory, N. C. Oct. 14.—Hickory is to have soon a large and commodious hotel. Since the burning of the Hickory Inn last March the town has been without adequate hotel facilities to accommodate a large travelling patronage. But a company is being formed to build a large modern hotel, and options are secured already on desirable locations. Efforts were made to secure the site on which the Hickory Inn stood but the owner of the property, Mr. Frank Loughran of Asheville, demanded such a price that negotiations were called off. But other, and more desirable, locations can be secured at a reasonable price.

It is likely that a good deal more Indiana coal would be burned if it were not so mixed with car shortage, which affords no heat anywhere except under the collar. Indianapolis News.

CONDENSED STORIES.

A Colored Gentleman Who Looked With Disfavor on Speculation.

Morris Sellers Large, the young Montana millionaire who is devoting himself to the theatrical business, said at a dinner, apropos of his new theatre in New York:
"I think that theatricals offer a fine field for shrewd investors. They are very steady. They are not as the slave trade was during the civil war."
"Perhaps you have heard of the slave who wanted to buy his freedom. This was before the war, and

THE SLAVE SCRATCHED HIS HEAD AND FALTERED, since he was a very good slave his master would not sell him to himself at any price.

"But as the war approached its end the master not unaturally changed his mind. He sent for the slave one morning and asked him if he was still of the same mind about purchasing himself."
"The slave scratched his head, looked at the ground and faltered: 'Well, Marse Henry, Ah did wantar buy mahself, but Ah been a-studyin' erbout it right smaht lately, sah, an' Ah done come to de ch'usion dat in dese times niggah prop'ly am too onsertin', sah, to put any money in.'"

A Churchman's Wit.

Archbishop Patrick J. Ryan of Philadelphia is as famous for his wit as he is eloquent as a divine, and many are the stories told of his quick repartee. When Wayne MacVeagh, former attorney general of the United States, was counsel for the Pennsylvania railroad he called upon the archbishop in company with Mr. Roberts, president of the Pennsylvania system.
"Your grace," said Mr. MacVeagh, "Mr. Roberts, who always travels with his counsel, will undoubtedly get you passes over all the railroads in the United States if in return you will get him a pass to paradise."
"I would do so gladly," flashed the archbishop, "if it were not for separating him from his counsel."
On one occasion Archbishop Ryan complained to a Philadelphia editor that one of his sermons had been badly reported.
"I am sorry," the editor responded, "but one of our best men, who is likewise a Catholic, did it."
"What is his name?" the prelate inquired.
"Kilpatrick," answered the editor.
"And he came mighty near doing it," was the archbishop's final shot.

Humble Fruit.

James Wilson, the secretary of agriculture, was discussing in Washington the aid which his department gives the American farmer.
Secretary Wilson pointed out the benefit that had been derived from the introduction of durum wheat, of the wheat testing machine and of the method of extracting potash from granite.
"In fact," said Mr. Wilson, smiling, "I believe that eventually our finest products will be cheap enough to be within the reach of all. Then the story of the boy and the hot-house grapes will be as dead and antiquated as the theater hat stories of the past."
"This boy—he was a bootblack—entered a grocer's one day, and pointing to some superb grapes said: 'Wot's the price o' them there, mister?'"
"One dollar a pound, my lad," the clerk replied.
"A look of anguish passed over the boy's face, and he said hastily: 'Then give us a cent's worth o' carrots. I'm dead nuts on fruit.'"

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain in digestion, pain in blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least so says Dr. Shoop, and he proves it by his creation of a little pink tablet. This tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets—coaxes blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effect is charming, pleasantly delightful. Surely, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.
If you have a headache, it's blood pressure. If it's painful periods with women, same cause. If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 30 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.
Bruise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.
We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

A Certain Cure for Croup—Used for Ten Years Without a Failure.

Mr. W. C. Bott, a Star City, Ind., hardware merchant, is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. His children have all been subject to croup and he has used this remedy for the past ten years, and though they much feared the croup, his wife and he always felt safe upon retiring when a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was in the house. His oldest child was subject to severe attacks of croup, but this remedy never failed to effect a speedy cure. He has recommended it to friends and neighbors and all who have used it say that it is unequalled for croup and whooping cough. For sale by J. E. Shell, Dr. Kent and Granite Falls Drug Co.

But the average man isn't half so anxious to bet on a sure thing as those behind the game are to have him.
