DEMOCRATIC OLD SEA DOG
According to Dewey, Admiral Farragut Was by No Means a Strict Disciplinarian.

Admiral Farragut's methods were always simple. There was a saying that his personal price for being paid was his coat pocket. Generally he wrote his orders himself, perhaps with his knee or the ship's rail as a rest. Admiral Dewey in his autobiography recalls that one day when Farragut was writing he looked up and said: "Now, how in the devil do you spell Appalachicola? Some of these educated young fellows from Annapolis must know." Dewey adds: "A man who had such an important command could hardly have been more democratic. One night I had given orders for a thorough cleaning of the ship the next morning. I was awake early, for it was stifling hot. Five o'clock came and I heard no sound of the holystones on the deck.

"So I went above to find out why my orders were not obeyed and my frame of mind for the moment was entirely that of the disciplinarian. There was no activity at all on deck. I looked around for the officer of the deck. He was an old New England whaler, brown as a buccaneer, who had enlisted for the war from the merchant service. I recollect that he wore small gold rings in his ears, a custom with some of the old-fashioned merchant sailors who had traveled the world over. I found him seated up in the hammock, a thing where it was cool, with Farragut at his side.

"Why aren't you cleaning ship?" I asked. "I don't aim to blague," said Farragut with a grin and a smile. "We two veterans have been swapping yarns about sailing-ship days." The old whaler did not see how he could leave Farragut when Farragut wanted to talk and, I suppose, perhaps, he did not fail to enjoy his position as superior to the young executive officer's reprimands.

OWNED BY INFAMOUS TRAITOR

Wisconsin Man Has Ink Well That Once Was the Property of Benedict Arnold.

Among the possessions of F. A. Phillips, living at Easy Bluff, Wis., is an inkwell, said by the owner to date back to Revolutionary war times. The inkwell has been in the family since the time of the conflict of the American colonies against Great Britain.

Mr. Phillips came into possession of the relic in 1861, it having been handed down to him by his father, and his father got it in turn from his grandfather, who captured it among other things at a little log cabin near West Point at about the time Benedict Arnold was flaring on selling that strategic point to the British, but took French leave when he learned that the Colonial soldiers were after him.

The ink well, it is stated by Mr. Phillips, is the one that furnished the ink for the document Arnold signed during the British occupation of West Point, and was found among other of Arnold's possessions near his hasty flight from the place. The documents were stored and sealed, it is supposed to have been made in England and brought to this country.

It is an old article—this can be seen from the fact that it is made for quill instead of pen nib, a condition not met even by the holiest of quill dipping. It is square, with a little hole in each corner and a large one in the center for receiving the ink. The well is of stone, a most conspicuous which on that night resembles that of marble, but on closer examination it is found that it may be cut with a knife much the same as soapstone.

It is highly polished, nicely carved and is about three inches square and an inch and a half deep.—New York World.

RENT OF FIRST IMPORTANCE

Decision of Massachusetts Judge May Have Created a Decision That Will Be Far-Reaching.

When a landlord lets an apartment with heat, how many degrees of responsibility is he supposed to bear? May the tenant leave the radiator open and let the heat go, and the landlord be liable because the heat goes is not warm enough? If neither the landlord nor the landlord's agent is responsible for the heat, or is he liable for the full amount until the expiration of the lease?

A judge in the Massachusetts superior court threw some light on these reasonable questions the other day, by ruling against the tenant, remarks the Boston Globe. The landlord in the case appears to have agreed orally to put in new and larger radiators and keep the apartment nice and warm, but the promise was not in writing, and so was not valid. The tenant sat at his desk in his study, wearing a fur coat and with a hot-water bottle at his feet. When he remonstrated the landlord said something to the effect that if the tenant would shut the windows the apartment would be warm enough.

It appears from this case that while a man may elect either to freeze or to breathe impure air, he must pay his rent.

First Government Crop

The first furnishing of a government crop in Virginia, in 1904, when a bushel of cotton was sold for the sum of 12 cents, was a record for the state.

Harvests of $9,000,000,000.
Crops this year will add some $9,000,000,000 to the wealth of the nation. This sum approximates the largest total ever realized for products of the soil. Corn, although short some 600,000,000 bushels compared with the yield last year, is worth $200,000,000 more than the bumper crop of 1912. Wheat, too, has a larger money value than ever before. The same is true of cotton, despite the reduced yield in the Southeast due to lack of moisture.

These estimates are based on statistics of the Department of Agriculture, and as that department is noted for conservatism in estimating yields, it is not impossible that when final returns are in the total value of crops will be upward of $10,000,000,000.

Setting the Clock Ahead.

A resolution recently passed by the Vancouver board of trade approved a request for provincial legislation to advance the standard time in British Columbia one hour from the first Sunday in October. It was stated that during the summer months people slept three hours of daylight, while if the time is advanced one hour it will add that period to their recreation time in the evening. It is considered that this can be brought about with little inconvenience, except to the railroads, and it is thought that objection would be raised by these companies.

Second Trial for Murder

LA JUNTA, Colo., Feb. 16.—The case of Robert Harris who is accused of having shot and killed two marshals at Rocky Ford in 1911 was called for trial here today. This is the second trial for Harris. At the first trial he was convicted and sentenced to death, but was finally granted a new trial by the supreme court.
