England stands ready to bank every cent of our debts.

Anyway a suffragist can't go into her chamber for the most like a man.

Well, let us judge in the superior court of the Kingston Free Press.

So, when you think you've enough money to get married, buy an automobile instead.

The case of the mayor of Southfield shows further to what extravagance some men will go to satisfy personal desires.

Germany Are Cruel. Head line. Now, Germany war can not always be carried on without butchering up a few.

From a casual glance at the Tarboro Southerner it seems that that paper is no admirer of Mary Ann Butler.

The German aggression is standing up better than the world expected it might be. That Germany will come out on top after all.

Those Mexicans are now in a fair way to get a dose that will knock all the revolutionary spirit out of them. They ought to anyway.

Maybe the Kingston Free Press was right when it hinted that those cows that were arrested in Washington the other day were under the impression that they were in Noah's ark.

It's all right for a guy to sit over here and tell what he would do in the event that he was in Europe. But the rest of them wouldn't do a thing except run.

By the way, find young phenomena on the Washington Daily News has the honor of putting the news in it.

does he? A smart chap, that feller, ain't he?

WHY COTTON IS CONTRABAND.

Cotton has been declared contraband by the British government, and no more cotton is allowed to reach the shores of England's enemies.

This putting cotton on the contraband list caused considerable speculation in America, and especially throughout the south, because cotton is the chief product of the south and is how the south fails to find a market for its cotton the south is the sufferer.

The following remarks from the Philadelphia Public Ledger aptly describes the situation and tells plainly why England put cotton on the contraband list:

"If the British government had made cotton contraband in January, in all probability Germany would now be running short of propulsive ammunition," said Sir William Ramsay, England's greatest chemist, at the meeting of the British Science Guild.

Sir William left his hearers to imagine that if the British government should now make cotton contraband, Germany might begin to run short of propulsive ammunition next January. The basis of his prophecy is the fact that cotton is the chief ingredient of dynamite powder, which is composed of nitro-cellulose of about 13 to 2 per cent nitration. Shells are being poured out by the Germans at an incalculable rate.

Lloyd-George has said that in one hour of a desperate attack in Gallipoli they fired 30,000 rounds of 3 to 12 calibre ammunition. He has also claimed that the German factories are producing 50,000 rounds of field gun ammunition a day. Military authorities estimate that on a rough average for all the guns from 2 to 12 calibre, at least 4 pounds of cotton is required for each round.

These figures are approximately correct. The munition factories of Germany require 1,000,000 pounds of cotton a day to supply the field artillery alone with ammunition. This is equal to 2,000 bales a day, or 700,000 bales a year.

Further, great quantities of cotton are needed to supply small arms ammunition, to say nothing of material for clothing both troops and civilians."

Unless Germany has a large supply of cotton stored up, or unless she discovers something to take the place of cotton in the manufacture of gunpowder, the German nation is in serious danger of having a deficit in her ammunition supply. This will, of course, be to the advantage of the allies, and is what they are looking for to force the embargo on cotton.

MAKING A TOWN.

Greenville is a pretty husky youngster for its age, but it could be made to grow until it will surpass its present size. That's just what every man in Greenville should want to see every one that lives in Greenville should take particular pride in seeing this town grow until it has become a city. The metropolis of Eastern North Carolina is not too high an ideal to set. We can reach that position if we work hard enough, but this town will never be much larger if it does not wake up and decide that it wants to be a real town.

The business men of Greenville, working collectively and for the advancement of the town at the same time, can make of Greenville a city. They can be adding to their own fortunes at the same time.

There are so many opportunities for enlarging Greenville that it would be next to useless to mention them. The chief thing that the town needs, as it now stands, is more manufacturing enterprises. Something to give work to a larger number of people. Get the work for the people and they will immediately flock to Greenville.

To get the ball started to rolling, the local chamber of commerce should get busy at once and advertise the possibilities of this town to the men who have got money and who are looking suitable sites for locating their manufacturing enterprises. There are a thousand and one ways in which to begin this business of advertising and boosting.

The best plan to do some effective advertising will be to get out a prospectus of Greenville and mail it to every name that can be secured in the whole United States of America.

When some person reads something about Greenville, and incidentally finds that it is a good town, he will want to know more and will promptly write to the local chamber of commerce. Then is the time to tell him what Greenville has to offer.

Let's each boost Greenville for a larger and better town!

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hail's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
