FRIDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1915.

Eventually, the British are set on hanging Balfour.

The British line has evidently had his claws bled.

It is a movement that the Greenville people will never forget.

Free thought is first rate if a fellow will be careful not to let his thoughts ramble.

Not one year will the operatives recover from the strain that war has been giving them.

A dependable transportation navigate the Panama canal without danger from the slides.

We haven't heard of a subway disaster in New York lately. Must be something really wrong.

It is a woman's mission in the coming years to look the late General Grant and prevent them from looking to the future.

Unborn and gray are, we say, it, adopt hands a strain of value in the world that they are of the future.

Our business is to be a part of the world of your work, in our hands, and in our hands, in our hands.

Now, what is the cause of the economic crisis? Money is the cause. Money is the cause. Money is the cause.

"The war, the war, the war, the war." Was a thing that was made. There is no glory in the war, the war, the war, the war.

The situation is a simple one with a wife that she will be in preparation for life. She had better see the participants will get her.

According to the only opinion but the most of them simply assert that they have an iron stomach and a whole saw appetite and few hotel proprietors will deny it, either.

Seldom do we in poetry sing,
But if a fellow would be happy
And often have his little drink
Don't let a maid catch him sappy.

In the North Carolina Year Book we find the Greenville Chamber of Commerce spoken of, and that is about the only place that it has ever been noticed.

If the New Bern Sun would have Britton select a fair week for them, we would advise them to get on the good side of the old boy by sending along those promised oysters, via Greenville, of course, and in our care.

Dispatches from Raleigh state that Col. Wade Harris, of the Charlotte Observer, is sojourning in the city. The Col. should be careful or the mosquitoes will carry him away.

And a minister held a telephone communication with Demosthenes one night, through the medium of a dream. A plain case of a "full" night's dreaming.

The ruling handed down by the supreme court, giving drug stores power to sell drinks on Sunday and not allowing other stores to do the same, looks like discrimination to us.

Kinston, Greenville and Rocky Mount—how sad that they can not sell as much tobacco as Wilson—Wilson Times. Wilson—How utterly pathetic to think that the warehousemen won't advertise in the Times!

SHOULD CONNECT WITH THE SEWERS

Unfortunately, we expect, for local people, the mayor has been forced to issue warrants for their arrest because they have failed to comply with the recently enacted ordinance requiring them to connect up their houses with the sewers before the fifteenth of October. While in some cases there may be excuses for those people having failed to connect with the sewer lines, we believe that the most of them could have had the plumber to connect their house with the main lines before this time.

It is regrettable that we have any citizens here who would be so neglectful and care so little about the health of the town, and inasmuch as the warrants have been issued, we believe that the proper thing to do will be to have these warrants served at once.

But the mayor, wishing to give every one a fair chance, has instructed the officers to hold the warrants until Monday and then serve them, thus giving those that have already failed to connect up, a chance to do so.

Every one should have their houses connected up when the time expires.

SHOULD TEACH A LESSON

Miss Dolly Price, of New Bern, who attempted to commit suicide three two or three days ago, has handed down a lesson that should be heeded by every man and woman in the world.

The lesson is this: "You can not serve two masters."

Miss Dolly Price had pledged herself to two men, and when she found that her love was not reciprocated by the one of the two that she really loved, then she resorted to taking her own life.

Too many failures in life are brought about by just the same thing that caused this girl to pull the pistol trigger that sent a bullet crashing into her body, and today she lies under the care of physicians, expect to die any minute.

Love is not a thing to be tampered with lightly, it is something that once born, lives forever, and as one old philosopher has appropriately remarked, "Marriage is the cemetery in which love is buried." A man or woman should never give promise to two people at the same time. Nothing but worry will be born of it and in often results in the death of one or the other at their own hands.

People should regard love as a sacred heritage, handed down by God Himself, and when it is abused, then they are abusing the God.

OUR INDUSTRIAL FOES

Today the United States has several hundred different societies within its borders all striving to the same ends. Their plan is to create better working conditions for the laborers and to increase their pay.

Strikes are of frequent occurrence and they have become so frequent in late years that little notice has been paid to them.

In almost every case the strikers are receiving sufficient remuneration for their work to enable them to live comfortably.

But for some unexplainable cause there is a great industrial unrest among the petty laborers and employees working for large corporations.

They seem to have gotten hold of the idea that the corporations can survive by giving all their attention to the employees.

Such is not the case, for in this age of rapid progress and keen competition each corporation, or firm, must fight hard to survive the work of its competitor.

This unrest is caused, chiefly by a number of illiterate and self-styled champions of the people's rights. There is being much trouble caused by their soap-box speeches, and the uneducated laborers are becoming so thoroughly aroused at these leaders' pictures of the people's rights, being trampled by the fat employers that today the head of a large firm has his life in jeopardy unless he is protected by armed guards.

We are making a great fight now for national defense, and we are due to make it, but at the same time, some attention should be paid to these labor leaders and strike inciters.

These labor leaders should take into consideration what is being done for them by the employers. If it was not for the large corporations that employ thousands of men, we would soon have the old "bread line" revived.

The government could well regulate a good deal of this trouble by proper investigations of the places where the labor leaders claim that the laborers are not being sufficiently remunerated. The Government would be doing itself a service, too, for unless there is a halt put to all this industrial unrest, something serious is bound to come of it.

We hate strikes and riots. We believe that the working conditions of many of the laborers could be soon arranged by cooperation between the employers and the government, and then the government should bring strictly to account those labor leaders who are continuously causing trouble among the workers. These leaders are not doing all this work for the love of their fellowmen, but they are doing it for the personal gain they will get out of it.

Why not attend to the industrial problem at the same time that we are preparing for defense in other lines?

NOW ORGANIZE A CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

THE REFLECTOR yesterday carried a story intended to show the immense need of a Chamber of Commerce in Greenville, and THE REFLECTOR believes that, in a large measure, it was successful in its attempt.

THE REFLECTOR would not take the time to argue with a man that did not see the need of a Chamber of Commerce, for THE REFLECTOR feels that it would find no such man in Greenville.

Everyone must admit that a town the size of Greenville, and one that holds the aspirations that Greenville holds, needs to be advertised to the outside world, and then, too, everyone will agree that this advertisement will produce results.

Producing results is what should interest every live business man in Greenville. It is to his own interest that Greenville should grow because he can grow with it.

With that as the basis of the argument, THE REFLECTOR feels that there are enough live business men here, who want to grow themselves, to warrant the organization of a Chamber of Commerce.

That Chambers of Commerce help to build towns is easily proven, for such towns as Rocky Mount and Raleigh are examples of what Chambers of Commerce can do.

Thus, we find that we have shown the need of a Chamber of Commerce here and that we have proved, that Chambers of Commerce help to build any town.

Then, there is no further room for argument along that score.

The main thing now is getting a body organized. In doing this, THE REFLECTOR believes that some business man should start the move for organization, and in order to furnish the move for organization all the courtesies possible, THE REFLECTOR will publish any thing relative to the organization of a Chamber of Commerce without the penny of cost to those desiring to start a get together move.

Mr. Citizen: We have done our part. Will you do yours?

THE PNEUMATIC TIRE

The pneumatic tire is a rubberized article of commerce which remains air, tacks and horse-shoe nails with the utmost impartiality. Sometimes it will take in a long, inquisitive ten penny nail on Tuesday and hold it in a firm grasp until the family starts out for a drive on Sunday morning. When it will let go with a soft sibilant noise ten miles from a garage.

The purpose of the pneumatic tire is to prevent the inmates of a seven-passenger tonneau from being thrown through a brand new mohair top every time the car stops on something in the road. As this happens frequently when the inmates are thinking of other things, the only effect is to disarrange the conversation and back hair of those present and shatter a few nose-glass lenses.

It is very difficult to figure on what a pneumatic tire is going to do next. It is apt to blow out in a resonant tone of voice, like a wooden-legged carpenter falling through a skylight, and leave the entire family stranded on a side hill, but this never happens except when the spare tire is at the garage, being vulcanized. In case an extra tire is handy, it will not take over half a day for the average man to get it on the rim and blow it up with a hand pump, especially if his wife is a born mechanic.

Punctures in pneumatic tires are caused by some foreign substance entering the inner tube and allowing the air to retire to some spot where it will not be of any assistance whatever. Punctures can be cured at about half the cost of the original tire, but a blow-out is usually fatal to everybody but the garage proprietor.

Pneumatic tires are generally guaranteed for 5,000 miles when driven by people who prefer to ride on the road-bed. Automobile owners with abundant means usually carry an extra tire on a rim in the rear. This is done so that in case of a puncture there will be nothing to do but remove the cover from the spare tire, unclamp four bolts and wring it out of the tire carrier, jack up the car in a sitting posture, unclamp four more bolts, take off the wheel, tear down the differential, hammer the old rim into submission with a sledge and drive on the new one with an axe. When this is done on a hot day by a stout citizen surrounded by several admiring relatives it is a very pleasing operation.

The pneumatic tire is cheaper, better and less brittle than it used to be, and if the price continues to decline it will take its place as a household necessity, along with the five-foot bath tub and electric curling iron.
