a far down-town office a charming day a visitor noticed that her pencil was exceptionally well sharpened.

"Who sharpens your lead pencils for you?" inquired the visitor. "Nobody; do it myself," answered

The visitor arched his eyebrows and looked as incredulous as he knew

"If you don't believe it I'll sharpen yours for you," said the young lady, with a note of defiance in her voice. The visitor produced a somewhat battered-looking pencil which he had just borrowed from a friend. She took it in her left hand, with the point aimed at the celling, and then from some mysterious place in her deak produced one of the most formidable carpenter's chicels which it had ever been the lot of the visitor to meet. It must have been at least sixteen inches long, and the an inch and a quarter wide. Without the least hesitation she applied the chisel to the pencil and began shaving off slices of wood around the point. Before the visitor regained control of his organs of speech she handed the pencil back to him, from our consul at St. Petersburg dealing with the probable effect of the opening of the Siberian railroad on the wheat supply of Europe. Con-sul General Jonas thinks that from West Siberia alone at least 6,000,000 into market by this railroad, and that the completion of the line will triots which are nearest European Russia. In three of these districts, Tobolsk, Tomsk and Yenisulsk, the surplus for export was over 80,000,-000 bushels in 1889, and has been enormous in each year since. There are sections of Siberia which will be made accessible by the new railroad made accessible by the new railroad which are better adapted to wheat raising than these fertile districts, and the quantities to be marketed will probably increase yearly. There is no encouragement in these estimates to American wheat growers who are hoping for higher prices.—Springfield Republican.
