"Poor Clothes make unhappy faces."

It is a well known fact that a man's emotions and surroundings will in time have an effect on his facial expressions. That is to say, if a man for any considerable time wears a raw-edge collar he will look unhappy, or if his trousers are fringed at the bottom, or if his coat is too tight in the back it will have the same effect. In your trouble come to us, we will try and help you out in Clothing, Shoes and Hats, Collars, Cuffs and Ties. If you need anything in this line, call and see us, we will do you right. HOWARD.

The fall crop of Irish potatoes seems to have been good throughout this section. The Kinston Free Press tells of the crop of Mr. J. W. Grainger of Lenoir county.

He averaged about sixty barrels to the acre of very fine, large ones. The Free Press says the other truckers of that locality also had good success.

Senator Ransom is confined to his room from injuries received by being thrown from his buggy Wednesday at his farm on Roanoke river. The cause of the accident was that the horse became frightened by the tongue of the double buggy breaking loose from the axle while he and his son Thomas were driving.

Delighted visitors to the collection Rev. L. Mogabgab is exhibiting in the Y. M. C. A. Hall declare that those who fail to view the collection do not realize what they are missing. They say the magnificent views alone are worth the price of admission, and the collection of articles from the eastern counties make up an exhibit such as one does not get so easy an opportunity of seeing often. It is an educational exhibit which will benefit every student of the Bible. They are articles which were worthy of a place at the world's fair and which were shown there.

FOR SOUTHERN DEVELOPMENT.

International Colonization Co., of Norfolk—A Representative (in New Berne)—What The Company is and What It Proposes to do.

Mrs. L. J. Velasquez—Beard, whose husband Col. Wm. Beard, is Vice President of the International Colonization Company (incorporated) which was organized a little over six weeks ago in Norfolk with headquarters in that city was among the passengers on the steamer Neuse yesterday.

Mrs. Beard comes as the duly authorized representative of the company. Her object in this first visit is to get the people informed upon and interested in the work which it is proposed to accomplish, and also to have some one appointed to look after lands and take care of the company.

The company proposes to carry on its operations in all the country lying south of a line running through Washington city westward to the Pacific; the principal object is to attract good settlers and capital to the South; to develop the resources of special localities, and to encourage the establishment of profitable industries that will give impetus to every branch of business and trade where such industries are established. It is proposed to bring over not less than 1250 families of a desirable class of immigrants to this country every year and to give bond guaranteeing the bringing of this number of desirable families.

The class of emigrants which it is proposed to bring are the sturdy and thrifty peasantry of Finland, Norway, Denmark, Sweden and the north of Scotland, men who have means to pay for lands and then in some instances have capital left beside, who are skilled laborers, and who will erect factories, and develop the localities in which they settle or colonize.

A grand reliance of the company for the successful cultivation of its plans is the man who is its general agent at New York. This is Mr. Emil Lindburg who has held the position of consul general to Sweden, from that circumstance and from experience in immigration work in a commanding position relative to such changes of settlement. Not only does he wield wide influence among those spoken of but he is also in receipt of thousands of letters from settlers in the North west who have their eyes turned longingly southward. Many letters from those still in the "old countries" are Eastern North Carolina as the place which they wish to make their new home.

Mrs. Beard is a native of the West Indies, a Louisiana by adoption (the family removed there when she was but a child) is thoroughly southern in attachment and for twenty-seven years she has been engaged in efforts looking to development of the Southern States. She is a writer, and not only contributes to publications in this country but now contributes also to forty-two papers in Sweden and Scotland, the countries among the citizens of which the International colonization company is directing its chief efforts.

Mrs. Beard has letters of strong endorsement from some of the most prominent men of the South, of recent date and running back for a number of years.

We hope that her work and that of the Colonization Company may bring forth large and permanent beneficial results.

NEW FURNITURE STORE.

Sneed & Co., P. N. Hewin, Manager, Will Soon Open.

The store, No. 82 Pollock street, adjoining M. E. Whitelaw's, from which Messrs. Hall, Hibbard, and Chadwick recently moved, will soon become a well stocked furniture store.

The firm will be Sneed & Co., P. N. Hewin, manager. It will be a branch establishment of the Wilmington House of Sneed & Co. Many of the mattresses, lounges, etc., will be manufactured in Wilmington.

Mr. Hewin, the manager, recently of St. Louis, is now making his preparations opening. He informs us that he will carry a very select line as good as any trade around calls for.

Captain Hamilton C. Graham.

The extract following from the Mobile Register, gives us tidings of a former New Bernian. Captain Graham was long a resident here, and in 1885 delivered the annual address before our Confederate Memorial Association. During the late war he served in the 7th and 22nd Regiments, and was badly wounded at Gaines' Mill in June, 1862. He is now a member of the Alabama Legislature.

"Captain H. C. Graham, of Selma, the able editor of the Journal of that city, has in the November number of the Blue and Gray an article upon the subject, 'How North Carolina Went into the War.' In faithfulness of detail and graphic descriptions it is like a chapter out of Mr. DeLeon's 'Four Years in Rebel Captivity,' and is a valuable contribution to the records of a little known side of the great struggle between the states."

NEWS IN BRIEF.

An easy way to make the Chinese go would be to get a few Japs to come over and chase them away.

Election surprises continue to turn up. The majority in Kansas against the woman suffrage constitutional amendment exceeds 30,000.

Rev. Sam Jones has become associated with Rev. B. F. Haynes as editor of the Tennessee Methodist, published at Nashville as the organ of the Tennessee Conference.

John J. Ingalls, of Kansas, announces that he is in the hands of his friends. Good enough. His enemies have been having fun with him long enough.

Estimates of the cotton crop made on the Charleston, S. C., Exchange vary from 9,000,000 to 10,000,000 bales. It is expected that Charleston's receipts this year will be fully 400,000 bales, of which 188,782 bales have been so far received.

Chicagoans evidently mean business. The committee on election frauds of the civic federation is raising a guarantee fund of $50,000 to prosecute violations of the elections law at the recent election. Over $60,000 is already subscribed. Levi Z. Lister, a Democrat, heads the list with $5,000, and the next highest subscriber also is a Democrat.

A USEFUL LIFE ENDED.

Death of William L. Walters, Vice-President and ex-President of the Atlantic Coast Line—Something of His Life and Achievements—Millionaire, Philanthropist—Art Patron and Financier.

Mr. William L. Walters, one of the wealthiest and best-known citizens of Baltimore, and the owner of the finest private art collection in the country, died Thursday morning at his home. The immediate cause of his death was paralysis of the stomach. Mr. Walters was 76th year, and a widower. He left a daughter and one son.

From exchanges we call the following facts of his eventful and successful career: The lamented Mr. Walters was the beloved father of Mr. H. Walters, of Wilmington, president of the Atlantic Coast Line company. He was the financial head and centre of the great system, and became interested and instrumental in its organization in 1868 or 1869. In this connection he is said to have done more to develop North Carolina than any other man and in his death our State feels and sustains a great loss. He was a very approachable gentleman of the old school, and was noted for his urbanity and culture. He was a man whose word was his bond, and being a financier of great ability and a sagacious and enterprising manager, he was a prime factor in building up the magnificent railway system which is a pride to all North Carolinians. He was the largest stockholder in the Coast Line, of which the Wilmington & Weldon R. R., this State is the pivotal organization, and was its president until about a year ago when his son, Mr. H. Walters, succeeded him as its head. He was then made vice president of the system, the office which Mr. H. Walters formerly held.

In the death of Mr. Walters Baltimore loses her foremost citizen in public spirit and enterprise.

He had been identified with Southern development since 1871. Mr. Walters took an active interest in the organization of the Southern Investment Company, which has done so much to attract capital to that section. He owned large tracts of land in the South, and was interested in several of the wealthiest enterprises in Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama and other Southern States.

A GRAND SCHEME.

For a long time he believed in the profitable practicability of uniting the lakes and the gulf by one continuous line of railroad, of straight line and easy grades, east of the Alleghenies; and he purchased over 500 miles of continuous and tributary southern railroads, discharging in two years for this property over $5,000,000.

Mr. Walters was president of the first steamship line established between Baltimore and Savannah, and a director from time to time in every line established from Baltimore to the South.

At the close of the war he insisted on the advantage of immediately re-establishing all southern lines of steamers, aided them in many ways, and also urged and aided the organization of other lines.

He was president of the first steamship line between Baltimore and Savannah and a director in every line established between Baltimore and the South. He was the most active of all men in re-establishing Southern communication.

Besides being connected with many other institutions, he was president of the Peabody Institute, trustee of the Corcoran Art Gallery, at Washington, and president of the Safe Deposit and Trust Company of Baltimore. His estate is estimated to be worth about 10,000,000.

A FRIEND OF ART.

William T. Walters was beyond all question Baltimore's foremost, most liberal, and most discriminating friend of art. His early fondness for art induced Mr. Walters to devote part of the profits of his first year in business to the purchase of fine pictures. Each year he has added to this lot, until now the world knows that William T. Walters had one of the finest private collections of pictures and bric-a-brac in existence. He bought the famous peach-blow vase, it will be remembered, for $15,000.

It was in art that Mr. Walters' taste was particularly prominent. He was intimately known to the best American European artists, and his life in Europe from 1861 to 1865 brought him into contact with the most celebrated painters there. The nucleus formed by his purchase of art works with the first year's profits of his business in Baltimore has grown to a collection which in many respects is superior to any other in private hands anywhere. Not only are his paintings a notable assemblage of the greatest works of modern masters, but his Oriental collection of rare artistic skill is the costliest and most representative of any private collection in the world. These treasures have been thrown open to public view on certain days in each year, and all the money arising from admission fees, amounting to large sums annually, have been given to the poor of Baltimore. Similar liberality has been extended by him in other directions. A few years ago a gift of $10,000 from him enabled the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York to be opened on Sundays, and he has literally added other like organizations.

INTRODUCER OF FINEST LIVE STOCK.

Shortly after the war Mr. Walters came interested in the Percheron horses of France, and convinced that the stock of Maryland would be benefited for working purposes by the introduction of this sturdy stock, he imported a number of the finest specimens of stallions and mares in 1867. Jersey cows, of blue blooded pedigree, came in for a share of his attention, and he had great enjoyment in developing their milk and butter giving capacities. The interior of his dairy was of spotless white marble. In later years Mr. Walters could not find time to attend personally to his live stock and he had sold most of his valuable animals. The last sale took place about seven years ago.

STATE IMMIGRATION.

The Tide Turning This Way from the West and the East—Nebraskan Colonists.

Our people will remember the recent visit here of a couple of ladies from Nebraska. Their visit seems to be already bearing fruit in turning settlers from the bleak north-west to our genial, productive and hospitable clime as will be seen by the following extracts from the columns of the Wilmington Messenger written by its faithful correspondent:

"Mention was made two months ago that Mr. H. H. Stoddard, of Nebraska, had leased a farm near here and would raise French coach horses. Mr. Stoddard has arrived. He is the advance guard of a little colony of Nebraskans, it is thought.

Mr. T. K. Bruner, of the Department of Agriculture, says that it has advised that ten families from Nebraska will settle in this State by the end of this year. These are all desirable people. Some who want to come the correspondent does not recommend and he has advised them to remain. A colony of good people from New England will also come. A gentleman in Connecticut is interesting himself in this matter.

"Nebraskans ought to come South. The drought this year nearly ruined many of them. Mrs. H. H. Chandler, who is here as a settler, says that people there are actually shooting their cattle to keep the latter from starving to death. She was astonished at the contrast between North Carolina as she saw it last summer, with its green fields, and Nebraska, parched like a desert. The contrast was awful. Yet the Nebraska papers suppress much of this and they will not publish the names of people who leave that bleak State to come South."
