His outfit except his most important books were consumed by the fire and yet he has gotten out an extra giving particulars of the fire and announcing his intention of not missing an issue. This is commendable and the friends of the paper should rally with special effort to its support.

George Washington in Mourning.

The bronze statue of George Washington that has so long stood serenely looking down Fayetteville street, wore a new costume yesterday morning. The statue was draped in mourning, the black white and black bands hanging gracefully from his figure. Who hung them there or whether George did it himself the keeper of the capitol does not know. But a great many people here thought it about time for the immortal "Father of his Country" to put on crepe.--News and Observer.

EXTEND THE TIME TO 2 WEEKS

And Make the Fair a Representative Southern Exposition.

It Can be Done and Now is the Time to Give the Matter Due Consideration--A Few Suggestions as to its Feasibility.

Year by year the East Carolina Fair has gone on "enlarging its borders" and growing in strength, attracting visitors from a wider territory and also attracting exhibits from a wider territory until it has a reputation and a credit that is of no little value.

We had a remarkable exhibit this year, notwithstanding the intensely disagreeable and severe weather that prevailed over the whole country and which interfered materially with the attendance, and to a smaller extent with the exhibits. Had it not been for this weather the display space would have been taxed to hold the exhibit and the grounds would have been packed as never before with visitors. It would have been the largest crowd that ever visited our city and even more states would have been represented than were.

Even as it was there were a larger proportion of the quite distant visitors at the Fair than ever before and there were exhibits from greater distances and of a higher order than had been previously attained. There is not a Fair in the world that would not have had cause to be proud of such horses, cattle, sheep, poultry, and farm products as were shown, to say nothing of the native woods in both the natural and finished states, (which are a great resource for manufacturing) and products of our streams and sounds, and to some extent the underground wealth of the state as it exists in its quarries and mines.

The poultry exhibit was acknowledged by men who have made this department a study and who have visited all the great poultry shows, unequaled through the entire South. The same strong language can be used in reference to the Fish and Game exhibit as made each year--no other place gives such attention to an exhibit of either of these two last kinds.

With such resources as enumerated above at our command and with such prestige as the Fair has gained, why should not the exhibitions be more permanent in character? Why not extend the time of its holding two or three weeks or even a month each year?

We believe that with proper effort this can be done. No doubt those who best know the work that there is in holding the exhibition during the one week, will at first mention think of the trouble, and have in mind that there will be precisely the same trouble for each week it is open. But while of course there would be increased work, for the added time it would not be proportionate to the first week's. That takes the first effort and expense and that would all have been met.

No doubt some plan could be devised that would enable the exhibit on with certain features to be continued at comparatively little trouble and cost.

The Fair, as it is, has been of untold advantage to New Berne, Craven county and East Carolina, and its benefits are not confined to the area covered by its name. The mineral and other similar products which are not of this immediate region are all the better known by reason of exhibits at these annual exhibitions as are also the fruit, dairying and stock raising industries of other portions of the state, to say nothing of the outsiders who take advantage of the splendid opportunity the Fair affords of bringing themselves and their business prominently before the people.

Plans might be made for the next exhibition to be held two weeks and if the experiment meets with success, and it was then deemed advisable it could be extended to a longer time, possibly to a month.

As for articles remaining on exhibit a large number of people would be willing to furnish exhibits for the purpose of carrying out such a plan.

And, moreover, arrangements could be effected by which the exhibition could be run with great satisfaction to visitors without volunteer workers devoting their time to it. Some one could be placed in charge of the various departments whose duty it would be not simply to protect and care for the exhibits but to show and explain them to visitors.

These suggestions can be considered now and if they meet with favor, the year is ahead of us to make the effort for the holding of the next exhibition and succeeding ones a longer time.

The Fair is now in the eighth year of its existence and the officers and directors have during that time become thoroughly familiarized with all the various departments, consequently they are thus qualified from practical experience to expand and further develop its facilities.

And not only have those in charge become familiarized with all details of conducting the Fair, but accommodations for visitors have greatly increased. Our hotel facilities have trebled within the last two years, and the canvass which the Fair has been annually making for boarding places shows that private citizens have made special arrangements for receiving the visitors until the accommodations can be relied upon to equal any demand made upon them. And moreover the transportation facilities for reaching New Berne have also been greatly increased.

These annual exhibits are held in many cities of the United States that do not have near the advantages that this section offers and yet they are continued for from one to three months.

Tell Him About Your War Chaplain.

Rev. A. D. Betts, of New Berne, N. C., has been chosen to write a history of the chaplain service among the North Carolina troops during the late war. He must have the help of all the living chaplains. He wishes to hear from every one. They should tell him when their services began and ended, what regiment each served and to what church each belonged and something of their experience and work during the war.

He urges the old soldiers also to write and tell him about the work of their dead chaplains. If the chaplain loved the soldiers enough to go and sleep on frozen ground, to preach to them, they ought to be glad to write about them. Let several hundred letters go to New Berne in a few weeks telling about the chaplains. The State papers will please copy.
