ALEXANDER COLLIE

Remarkable Career of a Noted Confedemarkable Career of a Noted Confederate Brockade Runner of Wilming-vided into classes as follows: ton, N. C. Unce Worth Million s, Died

Alexander Collie, a man who few years ago was known in alnost Cruisers, every European capital died and on Dec. 12th, was buried in Woodlawn Cemetery New York, his death attracting very little attention.

Protected Cruisers, Cruisers,

In the war between the States Mr. Gun vessels, Collie was a noted blockade runner, Torpedo vessels, who established headquarters at Wilmington, N. C. Under the guns of Fort Fisher this "Blockade Torpedo boats, King" carried on a thriving trade in the contraband articles of war and exported the cotton of the South.

Collie, who at one time could have drawn his check for millions of dollars, died almost destitute and his funeral expenses were paid by a son of an old friend. There is no name on the coffin plate, for he died under the assumed name of George McNeil. Alexander Collie's home in London, situated in Kensington Gardens, was one of princely hospitality. It was gor-geously fitted up, had a corps of liveried servants, and the entertainments given there were on the most extravagant and lavish scale. This grand establishment was especially made the home of the Confederate officials and friends of the Confederacy in England, and Mr. Collie had often as guests J. H. Mason, the ex-United States Senator and Confederate Commissioner to England, and Mr. Slidell, the Confederate Representative to France.

In Wilmington, N. C., the firm of which he was a member leased one of the handsomest houses in the city. Following their successful trade and speculations during the war, Alexander Collie & Co. went into the cotton and cotton goods trade, and opened branch houses in Egypt, British India, Australia and file. There are 11,325 horses of this army.

Of the total 190,600 men 7,980 good farm, turn merchant, and die Blood and Skin Discases in an insane hospital.

I have seen a farmer travel about Always RRR South America. Operations were begun on a gigantic scale, and in an the markets of the world, in the early 70s, Collie & Co. made the largest failure known in the history of commerce. His liabilities above his available assetts were above his available assetts were about £40,000,000, equivalent to $200,000,000. Alexander Collie, the head of the house, who was responsible for the failure, had to flee from England, and he was spirited Horses, away to the private yacht of a friend, in which he sailed to Barcelona, Spain.

His flight from England caused a sensation, and though pursued by creditors and detectives he successfully eluded them. From Spain he went direct to South America, and after a few years reappeared at the White Sulphur Springs as a traveling salesman, George McNeil by name. He was there recognized by George Peterkin Grant, a wealthy Englishman, who owns a handsome estate at the Springs. Mr. Grant kept Collie's secret, and he remained in that vicinity for several years. He afterward went to Richmond, where, owing to his knowledge of finances, he became associated with the late Col. H. C. Parsons, James G. Blaine, Gen. Butler and others in the Richmond and Allegheny Armored coast defense vessels, Railroad, which corporation acquir- Armored cruisers, Prosperous for a time, he projected other railroads, but misfortune seemed to follow him, and finally he became again embarrassed and, comparatively without means, came to New York. One of the strangest things in connection with the Blockade King" was that, although he lived in comparative poverty in New York, his wife was living in luxury in London. As Alexander Collie he was supposed to have been lost at sea. He evidently made disposition of some property in favor Collie he was supposed to have been lost at sea. Bow Venezuela and British Gainla Laid Caim to Land That Was Unce

The matter in dispute between England and the United States is that of the continued grabbing of of new territory by the former and the enforcement of the Monroe doctrine, on the part of the United States to prevent it.

The dispute was originally between British Guiana and Venezuela. The land in dispute is about 33,000 square miles. It is claimed by Venezuela, but has been practically a "no man's land" Until recently it has been ignored by Venezuela. Britishers, however, prospected, and found that the land was rich in gold and coal mines. That meant that the country so rich belonged to England and she promptly claimed it.

Venezuela protested, but until Venezuela protested, but until longed to England and she promptly claimed it.

Venezuela protested, but until the United States stepped in to protect the small South American republic. Venezuela had to be content with protesting. She offered to submit the whole matter to arbitration, but Lord Salisbury refused to accept any such proposition.

England acquired title to the colony of British Guiana by treaty At the present time there are 64 war vessels of all descriptions in commission in the United States today must be somewhat conjectural. The starting point is fixed at the mouth of the Amsouro River, where the Schomburgk line reaches the grand mouth of one Grinoco. But there is no data from which to determine absolutely the course of the proposed British boundary through the interior.

Talking however, what is known of English occupation and preten-sion in the gold regions—including the existence of a poilce station at Cuyoni Mine, the protest of the Governor of British Guiana against a railroad, from Cluded Bolivor to Guicipati and the recent assertion of dominion as far as the source of the Usupamo River-it is easy to draw an approximately correct line.

All the points named lie in the high country limited on the north by the Imataca Mountain range, which originates not far from the Cuyoni River, and runs almost due gast inst helps the first degree of east just below the first degree of north latitude. Hence the present British line, beginning at the Schomburgk line bears southwest until it strikes the mountains, proceeds along their base throughout their westward extent, and then describing an arc, proceeds to unite with the Schomburgk line at the southern boundary of Venezuela.

It is probably no exaggeration to say that this cuts off from Venezuea about one-twelfth of the territory 122,134 2,900 2,405 1,731 which she regards as her own, 1,731 fhings That I Have Seen.

Everybody needs such a medicine. The Laumberman needs it for general family use. The Caumber needs it for his teamn and his men. The Muchanic needs it to his teamn and his men. The Muchanic needs it always on his work beach.

The Minor needs it in case of emergency.
The Planeer needs it—can't get along without it
The Farmor needs it in his hopse, his stable,

The Stock-grower needs it—it will save him
thousands of dollars and a world of trouble.
The Railroad man needs it and will need it so long as his life is a round of accidents and dangers.
The Back-woodsman needs it. There is nothing like it as an antidote for the dangers to life,
