STATE OR NATION, WHICH?

If the Democratic party of North Carolina can only choose between securing the State, electing Cyrus B. Watson and the rest of the ticket, or the election of electors who shall vote for Bryan and Sewall, which shall it be?

The non-action by the Democratic Executive Committee in letting the voters of their party remain in ignorance as to what they must do is making it more perilous each day for the success of the State and National Democratic tickets, for the speakers and newspapers of the party are kept blundering along without a ray of political light to direct their course by.

If this inaction means the sacrifice of the State ticket in order to elect the National ticket, why is not the fusion proposed for this purpose, namely, the gathering together under one banner of silverites, Populists and Democrats, and those Republicans who favor free silver, consummated at once, and the fight made on that line?

But on the other hand, if North Carolina is most important to Democracy, why cannot the voters of the Democratic party be given a free and unhindered chance, through their speakers and their newspapers to go forth into the fight, instead of being held back, questioning as to the policy which the Democratic State Executives may promulgate, and each day through inaction, becoming the less able to successfully cope with their political enemies.

The Democratic party in State Convention, declared for its candidates and principles. Why has the action of this convention been held in abeyance these many weeks, and the party subjected to a prolonged and unnecessary political inaction, when organization and action were so imperative in order to win in November?

No one seems to be able to answer this question, although the leading Democratic papers of the State have vainly appealed for some word or hint whereby they might take the cue for an aggressive campaign.

Six weeks, or a little more, is now left. Lassitude and inaction still possess the Executives, who offer no sign that anything will be done. The question of saving the State or National ticket for Democracy in North Carolina will soon be unnecessary to ask. It will be settled for Democracy by its political foes, and in a way that will mean sure and positive annihilation for the party.

By the Ogochee.

Now that Hanna has carried Maine, T. E. Watson will go insane; he'll tear up the earth around every stump and hurl forth fire at every jump. "For how," says he, "can the day be won when Sewall is at war with Sewall's son? Just see what trouble has come about—put Watson on and kick 'em out! Then would the cart be out of the mire, and we'd carry Vermont and New Hampshire; the Populists votes, ten million strong, to T. E. Watson alone belong; they follow him through thick and thin—bring Watson out, run Sewall in!" This is the shriek that will now be heard, fery, fierce and undeterred, from the swampy banks of the Ogochee to the far-off plains of Nebraska. If this noise, Tom, don't soon conclude they'll put a spider in your food.

Steel Other People's Inventions.

Just why inventive genius and gullibility should go together it is hard to say. Certain it is that inventors are the most gullible individuals in their dealings with others on business matters, and fall easy victims to the spiders who lie in wait for such flies. The list of clever men who walk today, while those who ride owe their luxury to the other man's genius and their own shrewdness, is an interesting one. Here are a few cases picked haphazard from the chronicle of inventions that failed to benefit the inventor, or, at least, produced for him merely a little of what was his due.

It is not necessary to be very old to remember when hooks were first put in men's shoes in place of holes, in order to save time in lacing the shoe at the top. This was the brilliant idea of an inventor to whom it should have brought a fortune. It would have done so had he been a shrewd business man. Being merely an inventor, he hadn't sense enough to keep his idea to himself until the patent office padlock had secured it against theft.

In the innocence of his nature the inventor confided the idea to a friend while crossing the North river ferryboat and the friend hardly waited for the boat to tie up in Jersey City before he excused himself, started back to New York and went on a dead run for a patent lawyer in order to have the idea secured for his own especial benefit. Another man is known today as the inventor of the lace hooks. He owns a splendid house and is wealthy. The confiding inventor got nothing.

The inventor of a patent stopper for beer bottles, something that had long been wanted by the trade, sold the invention for $10,000 to a man who recognized its great money-making value. The purchaser is now worth $5,000,000, all of which he made from the sale of the patent stopper. Out of the goodness of his heart he presented the original owner of the patent with $30,000, so that this man got $40,000 in all for his $5,000,000 idea. To give some notion of the value of patent rights on this bottle stopper the price came down from $1 to 6 and 7 cents a gross, and even at this enormous reduction a good profit could be made.

This last inventor was treated with princely generosity, however, in comparison with the genius who devised a pocketbook clasp in the shape of interlocking horseshoes, with balls at the end which snapped shut with a single pressure. The idea was afterward applied to gloves and became very much in favor. The inventor relinquished his prize for the magnificent reward of a kidney stew dinner and fifty cents, the latter having been advanced by the purchaser to pay the inventor's expenses from Newark to New York. The man who secured the idea and patented it, after treating the inventor in the royal manner mentioned, made a big fortune by his shrewdness. What became of the inventor is not known.—N. Y. Recorder.

Weyler's Sunday Sport.

Fifty-one Cuban insurgents, confined in the Cabana fortress and Morro Castic at Havana, were shot on Sunday by order of Gen. Weyler. So pleased was he with this observation of the Lord's Day that he at once sent the news by cable to the Madrid government. He has always chosen this day for his executions, with an apparently strong conviction that "the better the day, the better the deed." From his arduous labor of issuing orders and manifestoes, all of a more or less appreciative character, these butcheries seem to have been his relaxation.

Fifty-one insurgents shot! Fifty-one prisoners of war killed like so many cattle in cold blood! It carries one back to the barbarism of the Middle Ages, or to the unspeakable outrages of the Turks in Armenia to find a parallel. No wonder that such deeds drive the insurgents to retaliation with dynamite.

When Weyler assumed command in Cuba, he boasted, that in a few weeks he would have suppressed the rebellion. He has been there months and the insurrection is, if anything, stronger and more intense than ever. The Spanish victories, so called, have been mostly butcheries of "pacifists," farm laborers and people generally, men, women and children who were found at their homes peacefully pursuing their customary avocations. Weyler has proved himself incapable, and as cowardly as he is cruel. But once has he been to the front to inspect his troops, and even then he hurried back because of an approaching battle with the insurgents. He is awaiting 60,000 more troops from Spain, and with these, he says, he will sweep the island from one end to the other, and thus crush the rebellion. This, of course, will prove an idle boast as all the rest, but meanwhile he will wreak his vengeance upon such hapless prisoners as may fall into his hands. Let it be understood that among these may be

American citizens, and that the United States government stands calmly by and permits the slaughter to go on without even a word of protest.

Only within the last few days the government has ordered several naval vessels to the Levant to protect the interests of Americans in the Turkish dominions, and, if necessary, protect them from the fury of Moslem fanatics. Yet at our very doors cruelties and barbarities are enacted every day that call for redress, for prompt, energetic action, and the government of the United States rests supinely and permits the sacrifice to go on. How much longer must the world behold this spectacle?—Wash. Times.
