nries & Allen's Circu

Maybe you're blase about circuses. Maybe it takes a show with more rings than a barrel has hoops, with platforms between the rings, and every thing, from Edison's latest invention to a three-tailed Mexican dog to arouse your interest.

Well, you know that when a man has been living on canvas-back duck and terrapin and champagne until a French menu card gives him qualms the doctors set him down to some good, weird cld roast beef, with maybe stewed tomatoes on the side.

Thus as a cure for your lost circus

Business Demands it.

Mesars. M. Hahn and Co., the well known liverymen, have given the contract for rebuilding and increasing in size all of their present stable quarters on Middle street, except the brick front.

The building which will soon be erected, will be 43x140 feet, with an upper floor for hay, the lower part having stall room for fifty more.

Thus as a cure for your lost circus

Thus as a cure for your lost circus do not have to lay out in the air like cards shot through the wind when they go around. This is said tor. to be as good a circus as ever you crawled under the canvas to see and as wholesome and refreshing as the pies mother used to bake. You'll enjoy this show more than anything you ever saw under any canvas, and you'll have a chance to compare long ago with the latter-day ones There are five singing, talking and grotesque clowns with this show, to say nothing of a corrs of leapers, tumblers, gymnasts, aerialists and equestrians, besides a big museum of curiosities and one of the greatest chools of trained animals ever exhibited under a circus tent.

The admission is only 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children. ing parachute jump will be given twice daily—at I and 7 p. m. on date of performance; this is free for everybody, whether you attend the circus or not. See ad for days of yesterday with a load of oysters.

It speaks well for Messrs. Hahin & Co. that their business has made it necessary for this enlargement of their already good sized stable, and it also shown that in New Berne times are prosperous in the livery the talking and singing clowns of business, which would indicate good times among the farmers of this section.

Mr. T. S. Baxter has the contract for the above work, and the plans for the building were drawn up by Mr. H. W. Simpson.
