THE COTTON MARKETS.

December 1.

LIVERPOOL made a slight response to the better feeling in New York yesterday and at the opening prices were points higher.

Tas market then began to sag and January closes at 756 a net loss of 5 points for the day.

TREBE is next to no speculators in the market at present and it is almost impossible to advance very much without this element.

I HAVE not yet lost faith in cotton, but with the holiday season now almost at hand it is not likely there will be any decided changes till after January 1st. Adulces from the South are most positive that there will soon be a material falling of receipts, but there is yet n large amount of cotton beld at interior towns much of which has been sold for export and now waiting rooms in ships at the ports. This will likely keep, the port receipts pretty large. Abviss my friends who are going to bold for a better market to keep their eatton out of the weather to prevent damage and to save themselves and the are from loss and annoyance,
