THE UNCTUOUS ONE AT HOME.

"If Judge Russell will follow the lead of the News and Observer in all matters after his inauguration, as he seems to be doing in his inaugural address, his administration will be an agreeable surprise.—Raleigh News and Observer, Dec. 1.

It is always sweet and pleasant to satisfy oneself that you are never wrong, always a leader in politics, the saver of a State from the corruption of an opposing political party, the preserver of a Presidential nominee from the harshness of cab drivers and the onslaughts of would be hand shakers.

It is much to flatter oneself that you are all these things, but how different this all appears to the outlooker, who can dispassionately see things as they really are, not as the Unctuous One pictures the scene to itself.

The News-Observer is a great influence,—it thinks. This of course means a political influence.

It was a great abuser of Senator Marion Butler, before he was elected.

Its power of abuse and political energy is acknowledged to be the potent factor that made "Maryann" Butler, the Hon. Marion Butler.

As a State saver this year it has accomplished wonders. Its predictions of the certain defeat of "Russell and his Savages," has come within thirty or forty thousand votes of being correct, but this same Russell seems to have been elected.

As an anti-Presidential seeker of post Presidential emoluments, it stands unrivalled. It would be a winner if it succeeded, but it does not, that is not yet.

But constant failure does not daunt the N. O. It always finds itself after the battle with the winning candidate.

It abused Marion Butler, Citizen, but it honored Marion Butler, Senator. It ridiculed and misrepresented Judge Russell, gubernatorial nominee, but it does not ground itself as an unworthy slanderer and counseller of Governor Russell.

And now this Democratic State saver and President maker, is again advancing Democratic interests by taking strong sides with Senator Butler (in the State Senatorial fight the Maryann Butler, of 1894) to advance his, Senator Butler's individual interests.

And last of all the N. O. would lead that veritable Republican, Russell, the leader of the "savages," and tell him what is the correct thing to do.

Surely Democracy's future in North Carolina is assuredly safe, if Governor Russell becomes the tool and lowly follower of the Unctuous News-Observer.

Where Trespassers Fare Worst.

An Iowa newspaper, commenting on the folly of starting a new paper in a field already well filled, wisely says: "No man can please everybody. That is if he has any force of character, and so in every town will be found more or less disgruntled people, who are dissatisfied because they could not run the editor or the paper to suit their own particular wishes, and so they tell the editor seeking a location that if he will only start a paper in their town they will support him, and that there is great dissatisfaction with the other fellow, and that the new man can easily run the other out, etc. Well, nine times out of ten the old stays, the new one has slim picking; may do the other fellow some harm, but himself twice as much. Far better for men in any calling to locate where there is a legitimate demand, than to take the advice of disgruntled individuals, who care but little for the newcomer beyond what he can do toward serving their own selfish ends."

L. F. STYRON.

In the British City.

It is by no means certain that when the history of Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, colonial-secretary for Great Britain, comes to be written the most notable achievement of his life will not be the work he did when he was mayor of his home city of Birmingham. The Century Magazine contains a detailed account of the changes he was mainly instrumental in bringing about in the municipal government of Birmingham. The story is written by George F. Parker.

Joseph Chamberlain became mayor of Birmingham late in 1873. Chamberlain's idea of city government he himself expressed as follows: "All regulated monopolies sustained by the state in the interest of the inhabitants generally should be controlled by the representatives of the people and not left in the hands of private speculators." This was the doctrine which had floated him into office, and he had behind him the public sentiment of the Birminghamites.

It was necessary to pass a bill through parliament making the desired changes in the city's charter permitting the municipal government to buy the public works. The gas plant was the first property purchased by the city council. The price paid was a little more than $10,000,000. The price of gas was at once slightly reduced at the same time that great improvements were instituted. The municipal-ownership of the gas works has resulted both in improved service and a considerable profit to the city.

Then the city waterworks were purchased in like manner and improved. The tenement house evil was attacked. The city itself undertook and successfully carried through the building of extensive tenements, which it owns and derives rents from. The streets and parks were overhauled, enlarged and also greatly improved, while the general sanitary condition was rigidly looked into. The result is that the annual death rate of Birmingham has fallen four in the thousand. The city owns and operates the street railways. A sewage farm of 1,800 acres is part of the municipal property. The changes for the better in all respects have been, owing largely to the honesty and efficiency of the councilmen and municipal servants, marvelous.

Cannot Speak English.

Of the 70,000,000 people of this country a little more than 3½ per cent are unable to speak English. This count includes grown persons and children above 10 years of age. It is rather surprising to find that nearly one-tenth of these people who cannot speak English are native whites, and likewise their parents before them were native whites.

Who are these natives that cannot speak English? Are they the children of the unclean and ignorant Russians, Poles, Hungarians and Italians that have thronged to our shores? Well, no. The census of 1890 shows that 38,410 of them are found in Pennsylvania, and they are known to the rest of the country as "Pennsylvania Dutch." For at least 150 years those slow and stalwart Germans and their descendants after them have occupied the fertile fields and valleys of the Keystone State and have not cared enough about the country in which they have been born and reared and prospered to learn its language. They are something like the Boers of the Transvaal and equally set their faces against anything new. In some parts of Pennsylvania it is possible to travel for hours without finding a person who can speak English.

A still larger number of ignorant Americans are in Louisiana among the creoles, 41,390 of whom do not speak English. Finally in New Mexico are to be found 59,778 persons of the most ancient lineage of any of our native white Americans, who are almost as ignorant of English as a Digger Indian is. They speak Spanish.

If to the number of native white Americans who cannot speak English at all were added those who cannot speak good English, the figures would astonish even public school teachers. Not a few of them would be still more astonished to find their own names in the list.

Dr. Albert Shaw divides American pessimists into two classes—those of the east and those of the west. He says pessimism in the east is owing to either the "morbid timidity of the very rich, or the shallow ignorance of the small part of community that is proud of knowing more about Europe than about the United States." As to western people who believe the country is going to ruin, they are persons who have experienced "the bitterness of failure or of temporary mischance in enterprises essentially speculative in their nature." In other words, eastern people are blue and despondent because they are too rich, western people because they are too poor.

The time to brace up and be jolly is when everything is going wrong and you are away down in the mouth with the blues. There is no need to make an effort to be cheerful when all goes well with you, and it is no credit to you to be cheerful then.

It is to be hoped that before another presidential election the cause of political education will be sufficiently advanced to enable all citizens alike to comprehend that eggs are not arguments.
