ed that this country is at present the most active and aggressive competitor in the onion trade. Egypt has been regarded by some people as the land of pyramids a:id mummies only, but it has from time im memorial had a reputation for onions. Ancient Egyptians swore by the onion, and regarded the plant as sacred. The inscription on the pyramid of Cheops tells us that the workmen had onions given to them. and from the Bible we learn that the Hebrews, when slaves under Pharaoh, enjoyed three bulbs, and that when far away they remembered "the leeks and the onions and the zarlic." The trade with Egypt for onions is now so important that four lines of steamers are engaged in the traffic, bringing consignments from Alexandria to Liverpool, Hull and London. The Egyptian onion is a handome and useful vegetable, and by electing the best strains of seeds he quality tends year by year to improve. The Egyptian knows two arieties, the "Baali" and the "Misaoui," but supplies of the latter and are seldom sent abroad, as they bsorb so much moisture from the requently irrigated ground in which they are grown that they do not tand a sea voyage. The "Baali' mion is the more popular Egyptian mion and is grown in yellow soil, which is sparingly watered while the sulbs are maturing, in order that he onion may stand a lengthy sea oyage with little risk of "sprout ing." So excellent in quality are hese onions that efforts are, it is aid, being made in other countries o raise onions from Egyptian seed within my own experience I have Young fellows in these degenerate days have no idea how formidable a document a love letter was a century and a quarter ago. It was worse than preparing a lawyer's first brief or a theological student's ordination sermon. The Philadelphia Inquirer has abearthed a billet to the lady of his heart written by no less a personage than General Benedict Arnold of maledorous memory. It was written in 1775. If matches depended nowadays on love letters composed in this elaborate style, the woods would be full of old maids and old bachelors.

An Ancieut Love Letter.

The letter itself would cover many pages of typewritten manuscript. Life is too short to read it all, but here is an extract:

DEAR MADAM-Twenty times have I taken re my pen to write to you, and as often hav my trembling hand refused to obey the die-tates of my heart-a heart which, although calm and screee amid the clashing of arms and all the din and horrors of war, attempts to address you on a subject so important to its happiness. Dear madam, your charms have ighted up a finne in my benow which ean never be extinguished; your heavenly immgs is too deeply impressed ever to be effaced. My passion is not founded on personal charma only; that sweetness of dispestion and good-ness of heart, that sentiment and sandbilliy which so strongly mark the character of the heart she has once captivated. On you alone my happiness depends, and will you doow me to languish indespair? Stall I expect no return to the most sincere, arkent and the sentiment of the most sincere, arkent DEAR MADAM-Twenty times have I taken

If expect no return to the most sincere, ardent and disinterested passion? Do you feel no pity in your gentle becom for the man who would die to make you happy? May I presume to hope it is not impossible I may make a favorhope it is not impossible I may a presume to able impression on your heart? Friendship and exteen you acknowledge. Dear Peggy, suffer that heavenly basem, which cannot know it-self the caute of pain without a sympathetic pang, to expand with a sensation more tender, more soft than friendship. A union of hearts is undoubtedly necessary to happiness, but prive me leave to observe that true and perma-tent happiness is seldem the effect of an alli-rate formed on a romantic passion, where shap and extern founded on the merit of the object is the most certain basis to build a last-ing happiness upon, and when there is a tering happiness upon, and when there is a ten-ler and ardert puzzion on one side and friend-hip and esteem on the other the heart, unlike ours, must be callous to every tender senti-sent if the taper of love is not lighted up at

What a howl this love letter would raise in a modern breach of promise suit.

As to the materials of which this heap dict is composed, they include no lah, flesh er fowl. Mr. Grant is a vegotarian, except for some eggs and a little milk and now cheese. He considers that ontment porridge and unleavened bread made of graham flour contain the elements of life in large measure. On this, which some irreverent souls style horse feed, Grant subsists largely. He adds all kinds of fruits and nuts and a considerable quantity of peas and beans, He crosses out ten, coffee, sugar, salt, pepper and spices, as well as cakes, pies id puddings. Even with this simple food, however, Mr. Grant would not be able to bring the cost of his eating within 8714 cents a week if he did not partake of aliment very sparingly. He cuts only twice a day. Breakfast he takes at 8 and dinner at 3. He has no desire for food at other times. It may be mentioned that others than Grant, especially in our large cities, are also practicing the two meal a day system and find it agrees with them admirably. They divide the intervals into such periods as suit their convenicuce. Able physicians have regarded it as established by experience that unless gaged in hard physical labor two Special . meals a day are better for full grown Correspondents in men and women than three. As to the result of his fruit, vegetable

Six hundred thousand brain cells, every one of them capable of receiving and holding a picture of something we have seen or heard or thought of intently, would make a fine picture galkry in the course of a long life. Scientists declare all the sights and sounds we encounter and all our thoughts are registered permanently in our brain cells, and consequently in our minds This being the case, unless we wish to paint a considerable purgatory for ourselves for our old ago it is vitally important that we make our brain pictures out of the pleasantest, kindliest, brightest and best sights, sounds and thoughts possible.
